David R. Cook Given 4 State Prison Terms

Four state prison sentences totaling 22 years Monday were imposed on David R. Cook of Salem on charges of burglary and forgery.

Cook, an ex-convict who lived at 635 S. Liberty st., actually will serve a maximum of seven years, which was his sentence for a forgery charge.

Judge George R. Duncan of Marion county circuit court also imposed three 3-year sentences on three burglary charges but these will run concurrently with the forgery count.

Cook, who is on parole from a Wisconsin penitentiary, previously pleaded guilty to all the charges. He admitted thefts at the Barkus Feed mill, Oregon Pulp and Paper company and the Pix theatre in Woodburn, among other firms.

In other circuit court action Monday, Judge Duncan upheld a municipal court sentence in the city of Salem's case against Frank Jack Isom on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Last August Isom was fined $250 and sentenced to 30 days in the city jail. The jail sentence was to be suspended on payment of the fine. He appealed to circuit court but was found guilty by a jury at a recent trial. Duncan Monday ordered him to comply with the municipal court sentence.

Theft of more than $1,000 in government bonds from a Keizer district home was declared solved by the Marion county sheriff's office Monday following the arrest and signed statement of Jack Truxall, 24, of 610 S. Commercial street.

The bonds had been reported missing February 19 by James Collins, 940 Evans ave. Collins listed about $2,000 worth as stolen, but Truxall was said to have admitted taking only $1,100 worth. Bonds totaling that amount were recovered near Bend after they had been torn to bits and thrown from a car.
