Not the Grecian god, or the gent who makes maps. But about the chesty (and we do emphasize that) guy who bends iron bars with his teeth, busts strong ropes with his bare hands, flips opponents around like pillows and struts like Mr. Cock-a-Doodle-Doo himself

From Brooklyn and named Morris Shapiro, "Atlas" is a comparative youngster at the muscles business. He's still in his twenties, has war service behind him and spent a good many years of hard work developing his body and strength. His father was a noted strong man also, but died overstraining himself. The son learned a lot from the dad, and from others such as the late Eugene Sandow, Louis Cyr and Breitbart,

Besides his feats with the steel rod, here are a few other items

"Atlas" has mastered: He'll arch himself backwards across two chairs, and beat him just as hard as you wish across his back.

Hoisting the iron weights and dumbbells are kids' play for him. He can also take a five-eighth's inch hemp rope good enough to stand 3500 pounds pressure and pull it apart with his bare hands. Or perhaps you'd like to see him gnaw on a 10-inch spike and bend it with his teeth. He can do it. Fact is, he'll either bend the spike or bust the rope as part of his appearance during Matchmaker Elton Owen's mat production at the armory tonight.

Really this peacock of wrestling is quite a man. As we mentioned, he's just getting a good start at it. So just wait'll the big metropolitan villas get a load of him over television. The tall ego he weaves in with his amazing feats could make the wrestling elientele

Young Eddie Kahut, third member of Woodburn's illustrious ring warriors, makes his professional debut at the armory Wednesday night on Tex Salkeld's show. Up until new about all Eddie has done in the athletic achievement line is toss his snappy curve pitch for Pete DeGuire's Woodburn Junior Legion nine and do some amateur boxing on prep smokers and other inter-school shows.

But if we're to take the gospel of Salkeld and Eddie's older brothers Joe and Tony, we'll see a real prospect in one of the Wednes-day night four-rounders. All three are convinced young Eddle has more on the fistic ball as a beginner than either Joe or Tony had when they started. Fact is, Eddie is Matchmaker Salkeld's one big

Preps Rack Up 49-39 Victory

District 11 Tourney Nearing Finish Line

Mt. Angel's Preps, looking more like the quint that copped the Wil-lamette Valley league championship, last night upended the Woodburn Bulldogs with a third quarter surge and advanced to the finals of the district 11 basketball tournament at the Vik Villa. The score was 49-39 in the hardfought struggle, and the big break in the game came in period three when Coach Gene Barrett's Hill-toppers broke from behind a halftime deficit to go 10 points ahead.

The Bulldogs, with two losses, dropped from the tourney and joined Stayton, Silverton and Sacred Heart on the sidelines. The Preps advance to a Wednesday night game with Salem's Vikings. night game with Salem's Vikings.
That one starts at eight o'clock and if the Viks win it the tourney will be over. Should Mt. Angel pull the upset it will be after, a final game will be played for the state tourney ticket Friday night.

Waitkus Faces Fight for Job By Joe Reichler

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 6 -(P)- If grim determination and pure stubbornness mean anything then Eddie Waitkus is going to win his flight to regain his old first base job with the Fightin' Pholadelphia Phillies.

The odds are still stacked heavily against the young man who came within an inch of leaing his life in the shooting incident in a Chicago hotel room last summer.

Not only does he have to overcome months of enforced idle-ness following a long hospital siege, but he must beat out a very worthy opponent in Dick Sieler.

Not many people believe Waitkus can do it. Not even his manager, Eddie Sawyer, who bet him a dinner that Sisler beats him out for the job.

But Waltkus does and it isn't easy to go against a lad who not only cheated death but spent four long, weary, back-breaking months geiting nearly dormant muscles to function as of old. "It's impossible for anyone to realize the torture I went through the first month I ar-"Every moment was an agony itself.
