When the long batting, throw-ing, running and fielding sortie was finally over, the 30-odd team candidates in camp knew they hadn't been on a picnic, Liska now has less than three weeks in which to trim up his squad, and from the looks of what went on during today's pitch he means to have it in A-1 shape by the time the WIL bell rings April 18.

There were no new arrivals in camp today, but before the week is over it is expected that Catchers Buster McMillan and Bill Courage, Pitcher Bob Stevenson, Infielder Everett Scrivner and Mary Diercks who also were with Portland last month. Some of the others who live in California, including Mel (Hambone) Wasley, Bob Haddock, Bill Osborn and Nick Muti, have been playing winter ball and aren't far off top

'Minor' Sports

The "minor" sports-the relatively unsung ones compared to football, basketball and baseball -took center stage at Friday noon's Salem Breakfast club meeting.

Clubbers and other guests heard interesting tid-bits and sidelights of golf, wrestling, tennis and swimming from local men who know those sports best.

Don Bowles, the popular pro at Salem Golf club, delivered some interesting points on the divot game and stressed what a boom the sport has enjoyed in the Salem area in the past decade. Don laid down some golfing facts of particular interest to an assemblage which included a goodly share of links "duffers." Hank Juran, the successful Salem high wrestling mentor, told of the growth of the mat sport at the Vik school and paid tribute to his 1950 squad which boasted several state champions.

Speaking on the swimming side was SHS Mentor Vern Perside was SHS Mentor Vern singer. Vern made his debut as aquatic coach this year and though it was not an all-winning season, the Salems had one of the outstanding prep stars in the state in Bob Hamblin. Persinger remarked that graduation will hurt his team but he said carry-over material carries promise.

Del Ramsdell, Salem high tennis coach, and Les Sparks, net mentor at Willamette, spoke on that sport. They opined that in-terest in tennis has grown locally in recent seasons though still behind that of two decades ago. Jim Johnson, Bearcat links mentor, also delivered some words. Special guests were three Salem high standouts—Swimmer Hamblin, Wrestler Vic Schweitz and Netter Dick Deen.
