Mrs. Roe Cloud Selected the Oregon Mother

Selection of Mrs. Henry Roe Cloud, West Linn, as Oregon mother for 1950, was announced by Governor Douglas McKay on Tuesday. The governor's Oregon mother committee, meeting in Portland, selected Mrs. Roe Cloud for her contribution to the welfare of Indian women in the northwest as well as to community programs in behalf of all citizens.

Mrs. Roe Cloud is the widow of Henry Roe Cloud, former superintendent of the Umatilla reservation and who at the time of his recent death, was with the bureau of Indian affairs. Four of her daughters are graduates of Vassar and have earned careers for themselves in various fields.

Mrs. Roe Cloud received her degree in education from Hampton Institute, Virginia, in 1907, and nurses training in Philadelphia. During World War II she served as an army nurse at Ordinance. The family moved to Oregon 12 years ago and lived at Pendleton until transferring to West Linn three years ago. She is a member of the Presbyterian church at Oregon City where she was active in Sunday school work. She toured several states as a speaker for the board of missions for the Presbyterian church.

One of the two Indian women clubs in the country was founded by Mrs. Roe Cloud. It is the Oregon Trails club at Pendleton, affiliated with the Oregon Federation of Women's clubs. She was appointed by President Roosevelt in 1940 as a delegate to the White House conference for youth and children. Mrs. Roe Cloud is a member of the National Grange, the National Council of Social Workers and the National Congress of American Indians.

Presentation of the certificate designating her as Oregon mother for 1950 will be made by Governor McKay at the golden anniversary banquet of the Oregon Federation of Women's clubs in Portland April 20.

The program will be heard on Mutual Don Lee, 2:30 p.m. It will include Bach's "The King of Heaven"; Palestrina's "Alma Redemptoris Mater"; Vittoria's "O Magnum Mysterium"; Thompson's "The Peaceable Kingdom"; Britten's "Jesus As Thou Art Our Savior"; and Kubick's arrangement of Foster's "Beautiful Dreamer."

Students from six states and the Hawaiian Islands will be represented in the 84-voice group, directed by Dean Melvin H. Geist of the College of Music, and now on spring concert in northern Washington.

Mrs. R. C. Hunter has invited members of her club to a bridge luncheon this afternoon at her South Liberty street home.

General hospital building fund was voted to be paid at the meeting. The group has pledged the $2550 amount over a three year period.

Designing Woman

SMART AS SPRING

A tailored bedspread can be as handsome as a rancy re-ruffled kind, just as your severest suit is as handsome in its own way as a softly feminine dress. With the tailored bedspread, as with the tailored suit, it's the simple, smooth style, good fit and nice tailoring details that count. And hemlines count, too. A too small, high water length bedspread looks no better than a too short skirt. Here's a tailored bedspread design that borrows the neat weltings and kick pleats of smart unholstered furniture. The kick pleats do away with the long hound's ear corners of one-piece spreads, those folds that lie on the floor and are so easy to stumble over. Make the tailored spread of a heavy fabric, perhaps an upholstery, textured weave. Of make it of felt, which comes in wonderful colors and 72-inch as well as 36-inch widths.

On Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it necessary for the bride to cut the entire wedding cake to serve portions to the guests?

A. No, this isn't necessary. If she wishes, she may cut only the first piece, then permit one of her attendants to cut the remainder of the cake.

Q. If a man doesn't smoke and is escorting a woman who does, should he supply her with cigarettes while with her?

A. Yes; unless, of course, she has already brought along her own package of cigarettes.

Q. When dining in a restaurant, what should a woman do with her purse and gloves?

A. Place them in her lap or on a vacant chair, but never on the table.

Something Old Northeastern Farm House Needs Are Greater Than in Willamette Valley

By Maxine Buren
Statesman Woman's Editor

Recently the government made a survey of some 600 farm families, and found what the majority would like in a new or remodeled home. The survey was taken in 12 northeastern states, and it was found that nearly half of the occupied farmhouses were at least 100 years old.

Families preferred fewer stories in their homes, 34 per cent wanted one-story houses, 3 per cent of them were already living in one-story dwellings. Ten per cent preferred two-and-a-half or three-story homes, yet 35 per cent were living in those types. Farmers wanted a basement and central heating, they wanted a bathroom on the first floor, and if there were to be two in the house, one might be upstairs. Two-thirds of the families said they had overnight guests often enough to warrant providing an extra sleeping space.

Half the families expressed a need for more storage space for clothing, food, dishes, linens and household supplies. Rural homes in the Willamette valley, are on the whole, as modern and well equipped as city homes. The needs for farm homes is rapidly becoming the same as for city ones too. There was a day when the farm woman had to store more foods, as trips to the grocery store were less frequent and she usually had more canned goods, and less space to keep foods cold. The need for space for wood for the kitchen stove was another problem.

Western farm homes now boast refrigerators for storing, easy access to the shopping centers makes small quantities of commodities possible.

We have been interested for some time, in the rural building going on around Salem. A trip west toward Dallas will convince the most skeptical that the willamette valley shows prosperity in innumerable new homes being constructed.

New one story ranch style homes seem to be preference and many are going up alongside the old house. Regrettable as it is for us who have been raised in this section, and who deplore the going of many of the fine old homes, we realize that it's less romantic than it would seem, living in an ancient dwelling where ceilings are high, walls defy insulation and where plumbing and electricity has been installed after the place was built.

Heating is a big problem in such homes, and remodeling would be more expensive than any sentimental incentive would warrant. So many farmers, made prosperous in the past few years of good crops, are now spending some of their funds in providing new homes for their families.

We know that the 100 year old home in our valley is the exception—a 50 year old home is considered ancient in these parts. We also know and are thankful for the prosperity of farmers in this vicinity who very often show that affluence by their well kept yards and houses.
