Continuation of Rain Threat to Walnut Crop

By Lillie L. Madsen
Farm Editor, The Statesman

Continued wet weather during walnut blooming periods may result in serious blight infections unless control measures are applied, Willamette valley county agents are reminding growers. Even if you have but a tree or two but want to get a crop from these, the same advice holds, the county agents say.

Spray or dust applications will be due soon. Fungicides need to be applied in time to prevent infection for once infection takes place, no control can be obtained.

In 1949 losses averaged 25 per cent of the crop in unsprayed orchards, reports P. W. Miller, USDA plant pathologist.

Bordeaux mixture 4-2-100 is advised for general use. A summer oil emulsion, at the rate of one pint of oil emulsion to every 100 gallons of spray, should be added to the mixture to reduce the severity of leaf injury in the event that conditions favor its development.

Yellow cuprocide, at the rate of one pound in 100 gallons of water or copper oxychloride at the rate of 2 pounds in 100 gallons of water may be used as substitutes for Bordeaux mixture where convenience and freedom of injury are more important considerations than is cost.

There are also various dusting compounds on the market, commercially prepared which are just as effective.

In the event that the walnut orchard is interplanted with filberts, sulphur should be omitted from the formula as it is toxic under some conditions to filbert foliage.

Also apt to be effected if the wet weather continues during the blooming period are apples. Heavy apple scab infections frequently follow wet weather during the blooming period. Scab spores are now about mature, and moisture, the county agents report, is necessary for infection. Normally, with temperatures over 50 degrees, about 10 hours of moisture will be sufficient for infection. Two per cent lime sulfur, will prevent infections up to 50 hours after susceptible tissue first becomes wet.

Home gardeners can raise scab-free apples by dusting with sulfur at weekly applications as long as the wet continues. If weather is such that wet periods occur now and then but are not continuous, dusts at the start of each wet period are recommended.

Recall Vote Set Today at Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, April 13 —(AP)— Voters will cast ballots tomorrow at eleven city precincts on the question "should Mayor B. P. Larson be recalled?"

Active campaigning by groups for and against Larson has been underway all week. Both sides have been flooding mailboxes with literature. Recall charges were filed against the mayor January 12 and petitions circulated for several weeks.

After all petitions had been filed and certified by the county, it was found that 357 valid signatures were acknowledged, just five over the minimum needed to force the election.
