ton Thursday morning.

Improved relationships between this country and Latin America, and lack of progress by communism in the latter area, were described to Salem Rotary club Wednesday by Ivan White, former Salem man now with the state department.

White, economic and finance advisor for the department's bureau of inter-American affairs, said current negotiations are contributing to cooperation in the western hemisphere but that results will be evident only over the span of a decade or more.

With Latin America assuming reater role in the U.S. economy than before World War II, the speaker said that 17 reciprocal trade agreements have been signed. resulting in a near balance of exports and imports. He noted that private U. S. capital invested in other American republics to-tals about four billion dollars, far Breeders Seek exceeding governmental advances.
