Victim of Fake Medicine Ends Her Own Life

PORTLAND, June 15—(P)—A dying woman, whose condition led to the recent conviction of a 69-year-old man for practicing medicine without a license, committed suicide last night.

Police said Mrs. Lucille Tharp, 39, hung herself in her room of the hospital where she lay dying of cancer. Doctors said she had only a short time to live.

Otto Soles, 69-year-old owner of a laboratory here, was sentenced to six months' jail and fined $500 last month. Witnesses testified he had assured Mrs. Tharp he could cure her breast cancer with a salve.

She used the salve until the cancer spread too far for surgery to be possible.

MOTORIST KILLED
BAKER, June 15—(P)—William C. Rhodes, 26, Welches, Ore., was killed last night in a collision of his car and a lumber truck south of here. The truck driver, Donald Gentry, Baker, was not hurt.

Librarians Told to Weigh Books' Value

By Lillie L. Madson
Staff Writer, The Statesman
CORVALLIS, June 15 — Just because a book is found interesting or because it is much in demand is no reason to put it on public library shelves more than 50 librarians were told here today at the regional meeting. Eloise Ebert, Salem, assistant state librarian, presided at the sessions.

A public library's reason for being is much deeper than to entertain or to amuse, Eleanor Davis of the Albany public library pointed out. Certainly a book should be of interest to the person who reads it, she stated, but it should also be well written, and, unless it is labeled a fairytale, it should lay some claim to being realistic.

Librarians were urged to choose their books carefully, particularly their books for children and young people. They were warned against buying a book merely because it was a best seller, and Miss Davis pointed out that very few best sellers remained on the list of books worth knowing.

Told to 'Weed' Books
Both Marcia Hill, school reference librarian at the Oregon state library, and Miss Ebert also urged librarians to "weed" their books carefully.

"Think of yourselves as merchants. You are selling culture, good entertainment, education, knowledge, information. Merchants can't stay in business with out-modern goods. Neither can librarians. But like with merchants' goods, there are some books never outmoded," Miss Hill said.

A list of books in series, which Miss Hill said was not circulated by "standardized libraries," included such familiar titles as Appleton's "Tom Swift" series; Emerson's "Ruth Fieldings" series; Fitzhugh's "Tom Slade" series; Hope's "Bobbsey Twins"; Ralphson's "Boy Scouts," and a score of similar types.

Ebert pointed out, many approved books, just as interesting and even more attractive which could better occupy space on library shelves. They urged librarians to know their communities and choose books accordingly. They issued lists of many books which were not only "attractive and entertaining, but worthwhile as well."

Guests Welcomed
Mrs. M. Elwood Smith, president of the Corvallis library board, opened the meeting and welcomed the guests. Eleanor Stephens, state librarian, spoke briefly, and Mrs. Lola Belle Bel-lenger, former high school librarian at Salem and now children's librarian at Albany, told of her experience at Piney Woods, Mo., where she assisted in establishing a library.

Mrs. Marion Teal, author of "The Earth is Ours," was luncheon speaker at Benton hotel. She was introduced by Mrs. Constance Pease, Corvallis librarian.
