Street Changes Proposed By Albany Commission

ALBANY — One-way traffic on two generally traveled streets came up for consideration at a meeting of the Albany City planning and zoning commissions Tuesday, with Lyon and Elsworth streets the two under consideration.

At the present time each street is a through thoroughfare, while Elsworth is also the street leading to the bridge across the Willamette river. At the same meeting study was started toward the establishment of a county zoning board. Following an investigation by the board, the county court may be consulted concerning the possibility of such an action.

Poultry Hints on Choosing High Producers Given

"Oregon poultry men are confronted with the least favorable egg rate experienced in 20 years," said Noel Bennion, Oregon State college extension poultryman at the poultry culling school at the state fairgrounds in Salem recently. In Oregon, one dozen eggs has purchased about 9 1/2 pounds of feed this season. Bennion estimated a 5-10 per cent decrease in the number of chicks being raised. He said a slow hatching year usually is followed by a good producing year.

The discussion on poultry culling brought out several factors in management. First, a farm with a real poultry enterprise should plan to make brooding part of its business. Second, plan to carry the old hen flock through the summer months in temporary houses with close culling.

FBI Recounts Crime Spree Of Wayne Long

PORTLAND, June 17 — (AP) — The amazing saga of Wayne Long, who is accused of getting a submachine gun, killing a man, and robbing a bank all with the 24 hours he was being shadowed by police was recounted today by the FBI.

Robert L. Murphy, agent in charge of the FBI Portland office, told a press conference today some of the details of 26-year-old Long's wild fling at freedom. Long, captured Thursday after robbing a bank of $9,716, is charged with bank robbery, assault, and the first degree murder of Walter Rucker, 28. Sean Pinson lead.

The FBI told this story: Agents began trailing Long upon his release from the Oregon state prison Wednesday, hoping he might lead them to escaped life terner John O. Pinson. Forced to be discreet, for fear Long would discover his shadowers, police had to let him out of sight several times. One of the times was Wednesday afternoon. During it, he went to a house where fellow-prisoners had told him he could get a gun. The prisoners, Louis Funnell and Chester Lee McCoy, had stashed the gun in a trunk, and left the trunk with a friendly housewife who had no idea of what was inside.

Approached Driver Late Wednesday evening the officers had to halt their shadowing again. They had seen Long approach a truck driver at a service station, chat with him a few moments, and drive off with him in friendly fashion. But the truck went off into an isolated woods, where officers could not follow without giving their presence away. They posted waters at the exits to the woods, and early Thursday morning, saw Long drive out alone. They followed him back to town. It was not until he walked into the bank about 10 a.m. that they realized a hold-up might be impending.

It was much later still that a dead body was found in the woods into which Long had driven, and it was not until yesterday that the body was identified as that of Walter Rucker, the same man Long had approached at the service station.

Governor To Lead Parade At Molalla

MOLALLA — Governor Douglas McKay will be the honorary grand marshal of the annual Molalla Buckeroo street parade July 4. Ernest Clark president of the Molalla Buckeroo association, said today that the governor would lead both the street procession and the arena parade. The latter event is set for 1 p.m., just before the start of riding and roping competition on the final afternoon of the three-day rodeo — oldest show of its type west of the Cascade range. July 4, Governor's Day, also will be featured by a reception for McKay at 12:30 p.m. Clark said it was possible that the governor would ride his famed American saddle-bred, Eugene Peavine, in both parades. Street parades at 11 each morning and arena parades at 1 o'clock teach afternoon are on the Buckeroo schedule. Clark said that the west's finest riders and fanciest ropers.
