Forest Park To Honor Nels Rogers Talked

Creation of a memorial forest, in recognition of Nels Rogers, late state forester, was proposed at a meeting of the state board of forestry Tuesday.

Several thousand acres of lands in the vicinity of Owl Camp, in the Tillamook burn area, would be included. Rogers served as state forester for several years and was largely responsible for the forest rehabilitation program now in progress.

Definite decision on the proposal will be announced at a future meeting of the board.

State Forester George Spaur reported that 110,000 acres of timber in the LaGrande and Heppner vicinities in eastern Oregon have been treated in connection with the budworm control program.

The board said it was considering exchange of some of its lands in the Short Sand Beach and Arch cape areas for highway commission lands along the Sunset and Wilson river highways. The highway commission is to be consulted.

Expediting slash burning was suggested by the board as a means of reducing fires throughout the state. This recommendation will be included in a general burn policy laid down by the state forester. All board members agreed the in-service training program of fire fighters would be expanded.

An educational program to convince logging operators of the value of adequate slash burning and the necessity of cutting snags during logging operations was advocated.

Dairy Industry Said Facing Readjustments

By Lillie L. Madsen, Farm Editor, The Statesman
The nation's dairy industry may be facing a 10-year period of somewhat difficult readjustment, particularly in methods of thinking, Jerry Lee, national director of dairy department of the American Farm Bureau federation, Chicago, told the state bureau dairy committee Tuesday.

The industry, Lee stated, is faced with the continuous use of vegetable oils as substitutes for certain dairy fats. The dairy industry should not continue thinking of the vegetable oils as "substitutes" but as other "farm commodities," Lee stated, adding that "the feeling is definitely growing that it would not be a good policy to try to eliminate these. We merely want to control them to the extent that they cannot be foisted off on the public as a dairy product. They must be marketed on their own merit."

While the Oregon disease control law is satisfactory, John Gale, Canby, chairman of the dairy department Oregon Farm Bureau state, enforcement is not yet satisfactory. The state dairy committee of the Farm Bureau is investigating this with hopes of reaching some solution which may prove helpful.

Tuesday's meeting was called at the Farm Bureau offices on Marion street, but because of the number in attendance, was moved to the Copper room of the Senator hotel.

Free Chlorine Downs Albany Swim Teacher

Statesman News Service
ALBANY, June 27 - A woman swimming instructor narrowly escaped death here tonight when she was overcome while swimming in the municipal pool in a heavy concentration of chlorine gas.

Catherine Talbot, a regular instructor at the pool, was dragged to safety by bystanders about 6 p.m. George Chambers, city recreation director, reported the accident was caused by a layer of gas which gathered on the water surface from a leaking pipe.

The pool was closed to the public at 3 p.m. after swimmers complained about the gas concentration. Miss Talbot was revived by city firemen and taken home. The gas is used to purify the water supply in the pool. The gas had been leaking several days, Chambers said.

Better Grading Of New Flax Fabrics Urged

Better grading and development of new fabrics, which would result in additional markets, are essential in expansion of the Oregon flax industry, particularly in connection with the operation of cooperative concerns, members of the state flax and linen board agreed Tuesday.

Henry Crawford, board chairman, reported that development of new fabrics are in progress with favorable results predicted. This was strictly an Oregon venture in the beginning, Crawford averred.

It also was brought out that a large volume of improved flax would be necessary to cope with a more active market. Crawford said flax importations would have to be taken into consideration in perfection and expansion of the Oregon flax industry.

Most difficulty has been encountered in the operation of the several cooperative plants in Oregon. Largest plant is operated by the state which years ago created most of its markets. Prices for flax seed continues quite satisfactory, board members said, but the price of fibre has decreased materially since the war.

Jobless Pay Claims Start Benefit Year

Local offices of the state unemployment compensation commission this week started receiving new claims for the 1950-51 benefit year.

Those now unemployed may serve their required waiting week before the 52-week year opens with the week of July 2-8, the commission said.

Because of the more than $1,000 claimants who exhausted their 1949-50 benefits by mid-June, the number filing this week may be somewhat greater than the 8,711 of last year.
