Seed Growers Set Minimums For '50 Crop

By Lillie L. Madsen
Farm Editor, The Statesman
Prices of 40 cents per pound for certified blue tag seed and 27 cents for red tag were recommended as minimums by the Oregon Alta Fescue Seed growers at their annual meeting Tuesday.

Last year's certified fescue started out at 45 cents and during the winter went to 70 cents for some. However, in the early season a few lots sold at below the 40 cents minimum set for this year.

Reports of the fescue growers showed that approximately 1,200 acres will be harvested in the Grande Ronde valley in eastern Oregon this year. The crop there is expected to be about 80 per cent of normal.

The Oregon crop as a whole will be considered lighter this season than expected earlier in the spring, growers reported at the Tuesday night meeting. There is quite a bit of blank seed, Oscar Loe, president stated. Row planting is yielding much better than the solid planting, he added. Dry weather in May was held responsible for the cut in yield.

An Oregon label for the growers' developed by a committee which has been giving the matter considerable study, was adopted by the growers. Alex Sellers of McMinnville and Harry Schoth of Corvallis, joint chairmen of the committee, reported a canvass of dealers which showed that most of these indicated willing to go along with the plan and use the labels on shipping sacks.

Growers agreed that the label should be used only on sacks carrying certified seed or top quality seed.

The association represents approximately 100 growers with an acreage of between 3,000 and 3,500 of alta fescue seed. Representatives were present from Clackamas, Polk, Linn, Lane, Marion and Benton counties.

Oscar Loe was re-elected president of the growers and Harry L. Riches the secretary.
