Summer Party Decorations to Be Made By Children. Circus Theme Is Popular

By Sue Gardner

There is nothing like a birthday party to keep a group of youngsters occupied on a summer vacation day. If no birthday is in the offing, you can always make a special occasion of a "circus party" for the children. They can make their own decorations and favors, which will keep them busy a couple of days in advance of the party.

Materials are inexpensive if you use some ingenuity, and from a supply of lace paper doilies and crepe paper, most of your party decorations can be made. Take a small round hat box without a lid and turn it into a "Big Top" tent. You cover the box with yellow crepe paper and trim the bottom with a red crepe paper ruffle. For added glamour, you can cut out the lace edging from 6-inch round doilies and paste them ruffe fashion around the bottom of the box. A red crepe paper ruffe can be placed under this for color.

For the top of the tent you cut out a piece of yellow crepe paper across the grain, 17 inches wide and long enough to go around the hat box. Fold the paper in half lengthwise, and paste the short ends together. Then gather the long open ends and fasten with spool wire. You can decorate the edges as tent flaps with paper doilies and add a final touch with the addition of a red circus pennant on the top.

Invitations and candy baskets can be made in a clown theme. The children will get in the spirit of the party and will design their own favors once you have started them on the party theme.
