Increase in Forest Land Sale Reported

Large figures with considerable meaning to Oregon's economy came this week end from another federal agency, the bureau of land management. Report for the 1950 fiscal year by Daniel L. Goldy, regional administrator, stressed a sharp increase in sales of forest and other products from public lands and in conservation work.

The bureau's report, covering region I, Oregon, Washington and Idaho, included the following: Sale of 413,403,000 board feet of timber from Oregon and California revested grant lands and 23,450,000 board feet from public domain.

Volume of timber cut on O & C lands up 56 per cent from 1949. Timber sales of $4,271,008. Receipts of $236,981 from approximately 26 million acres of grazing land, on which ran 1,136,000 sheep, 506,000 cattle and 27,400 horses.

New conservation work included seeding of 10,000 acres of sagebrush and other semi-wastelands to crested wheat and other perennial range grasses; 121 reservoirs in grazing area; 112 miles of fence, along with truck trails, firebreaks, brush control, rodent control, poison weed eradication, spring and well development.

Goldy emphasized that forest lands are being managed for sustained production of timber and other forest resources as an aid to stabilizing many timber-dependent communities. This includes advance announcement of timber sales to enable lumbermen to plan their operations more efficiently, planning of timber access roads, new right-of-way regulations and a program of cooperative community economic studies.

1,000 Lambs Sold at 9 Ram, Ewe Shows

By Lillie L. Madsen
Farm Editor, The Statesman

TURNER, July 30—Over 1,000 head of lambs have been sold at the nine Willamette Valley Ram and Ewe sales, Claude Steusloff, president of the Oregon Purebred Sheep Breeders association, told the more than 200 livestock men and women gathered Sunday at the Louis Hennis place at Turner.

These, Steusloff continued, averaged $65 a piece and 80 per cent of them went into commercial flocks in the valley. About 10 per cent went into Southern Oregon—Coo and Curry counties, and the remaining 10 per cent was scattered.

Steusloff also announced the Saturday sale at Albany, the 10th annual event. He reported that the sale would start at 10 a.m. Standard time and that 135 registered rams and ewes will be offered.

Share Honors
Ben Newell, Marion county livestock agent, and Louis Hennis, president of the Marion County Livestock association, shared chairman honors for the afternoon program. More than 200 people attended the program sponsored by the livestock association and combined with the Oregon Swine Growers association and the Turner Farm Bureau group.

L. T. Woody of La Grande, president of the Western Livestock association, was introduced and spoke briefly.

Dr. Fred McKenzie, of the animal husbandry department, Oregon State college, who spoke briefly told that 48 percent of all grass and grain crops in the United States is fed through livestock. He told the new livestock breeding program being studied at the college to produce more meat on the same amount of feed.

Fischer Introduced
Others introduced were Walter Fischer president of the Oregon County Polled Hereford association and of the Clackamas Livestock association; Glenn Martin of Polk county; Lynn Forester, vice president of the Linn county association; Adam Hensch and Paul Jaquet who furnished the lamb for the picnic dinner; Glenn McKinney, president of the Oregon Swine Growers association; Eddie Ahrens president of the Turner Farm Bureau, Dr. Ralph Bogart, Joe Thompson and Jim Oldfield of Oregon State college; Harry Lindgren, secretary of the Western Livestock association, Auston Sanford of the Silver Creek Soil conservation district; Avlin Hartley, vice president of the Marion County Livestock association; Bob Sears, director of the Polled Hereford association and Anthol Riney, Marion county 4-H club director.

North Valley Tour
Riney announced the North Willamette valley tour to be held this week and the Marion county fair to be held August 23-25 at Salem.

Music for the program furnished by Hubert Aspinwall and members of the Luckey 13 4-H club.

Special guests were W. Von Scharfenberg, W. Mitscher and Miss Fredel Schirmer all of Hasen Province, Germany who are here from the chamber of agriculture cooperative in that country.

The three are making a study of farming conditions and methods here in Oregon and from here will go to Ohio.

who are from 17 to 21, while 65 per cent are below 25.

"Wholesome off-post recreational facilities are urged, with every citizen forming a one-man committee to provide for the uniformed youth "in the traditionally abundant and generous American way."

Wayne Johnston Winner in Better Farmer Contest

Wayne Johnston, who was graduated from the Salem high school in June and a member of William McKinney's Future Farmer group, was winner of the Upper Willamette district Better Farmer contest.

Announcement was made Sunday. The contest is sponsored by the Oregon Bankers association. The district included covers from Corvallis to Silverton and to Perrydale in Polk county. Twelve schools are included.

Johnston has a crop on livestock program on his 10-acre farm in the Sidney district. He won the State Farmer award at the state FFA convention this year and his record book topped all others in the state.

State Traffic Death Rate Holds Stable

Oregon's traffic death rate during the first six months of 1950 remained at the 1949 level, about five deaths for each 100,000 miles traveled, Secretary of State Earl T. Newbery announced this week.

The 1950 mileage death rate, ratio of the number of lives lost with the total amount of driving, was well below the national rate of 7.1 during the period, Newbery said.

Newbery said Oregon motor vehicle travel at the mid-year point reached an all-time high. Fatalities numbered 137 as compared with 133 last year.

Call Issued For Seamen

Because of increased shipping commitments brought about by the situation in the Far East, the military sea transportation service, North Pacific, is calling urgently for qualified marine personnel for duty aboard U. S. navy transports operating in the Pacific.

Needed are deck officers, engine officers, able seamen, ordinary seamen, electricians, plumbers, machinists, firemen - water-tenders, oilers and cooks.

The army in Alaska, which operates harborcraft, also needs mates, chief assistant engineers, seamen, oilers, messmen, cooks, and one chief engineer.

Presently needed to fill vacancies on Seattle Port of Embarkation harborcraft are four cooks.

Applicants for marine positions should report to pier 36, by way of gate 15, at the Seattle Port of Embarkation. Those seeking employment in Alaska should ask for the Alaska Liaison office at the gate.

Group on Horace Heidt Show

The Heidt-Stoppers, talent group which will appear with Horace Heidt and "Original Youth Opportunity Program" at the Salem high school auditorium Saturday night.

Both Local, East Talent On Heidt Show

The Horace Heidt "Original Youth Opportunity Program," featuring both local talent and regular members of the cast, will appear in Salem Saturday night for a benefit sponsored by the Marion county polo chapter.

Three vocalists from Salem, Michael O'Carolan, Charles Nee and Verne Esch, and Miss Oregon of 1950, Elizabeth Ann Baker of Monmouth, were selected to appear on the program after auditions last week which attracted more than 50 competitors.

The local talent will be competing for a trip to Seattle with the regular cast and for a regular spot on the show which was originated by the band leader who discovered Gordon MacRae, Frank Carle, the King Sisters and Alvino Rey, among other top performers.

Double performances will be presented at the Salem high school auditorium, one at 6:30 p. m. and one at 9 p. m. About sixty entertainers travel with Heidt, in addition to his orchestra.
