Pewter Ware is Now Popular for the Contemporary Home, Modern Design

By Sue Gardner

There has been a marked interest in pewter; this fall and winter you will see many fine pieces that compare favorably in style and workmanship with fine silver. One of the foremost of the pewter craftsmen is Lester H. Vaughan who has created a beautiful line of fine modern pewter ware for contemporary homes.

Vaughan's pewter pieces are primarily modern in design, but their simplicity and fine silhouettes make them welcome in any period. He has a three-piece coffee service, including a tall, graceful coffee pot and matching sugar and creamer, that is most attractive for after dinner service. Vaughan has also designed

Designing Woman

Don't be fooled by their open-faced, lacquered look. Eddily spaced china cupboard shelves are plotting destruction. If cups must teeter atop each other, and small plates stack on big ones, these are bound to be crashes that break up the set. More shelves solve the problem, but they need not be extra shelves in an extra cupboard. They can be shelves added to the same cupboard, to make better use of the same space. The added shelves may be full cupboard width, to separate dishes that fit badly together or to make a place for items that haven't been room for.

Or the new shelves may be half-shelves, to hold shallow pieces part way and leave space for tall glasses or tall stacks of matching plates. Redesign your own shelf spacing to fit your own dishes and glassware and the effort will be saved many times by easier reaching and putting away. The saving in china breakage will more than pay the cost of the shelves.
