Bridge Players in Duplicate Play

Contract bridge players who want to take up duplicate play may get their chance during October. Plans are being made by the Salem Elks Bridge club, affiliated with the American Bridge League, for a series of weekly sessions—probably Monday or Wednesday evenings—for those with less than ten master points.

At least one junior tournament will be held during the Sectional meet at the Elks club October 28-29, when experts from all over the Northwest will compete in four championship events. The Salem unit with nearly 70 members now has 30 masters and five national masters.

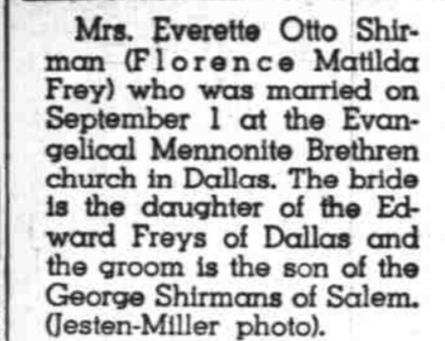

Winners with a score almost 87 per cent of the weekly competition were Mrs. Leone Taylor and Mrs. Dorey Howell with these teams in order: Mrs. Stuart Thede and Walter M. Cline, Mrs. Ward Graham and Ellis H. Jones, Mrs. Paul

On Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it really incorrect for a married woman to use her given name in her title, as "Mrs. Martha Gordon"? I see this quite often these days.
A. The increasing number of women in business undoubtedly accounts for the increasing use of Mrs. Martha. But it is still best social usage for a married woman or widow to call herself Mrs. Roberta, and for a divorcee to substitute her maiden name in place of her ex-husband's given name, calling herself, for example, Mrs. Smith Gordon.
Q. Is it ever permissible to leave the spoon in the cup while drinking coffee or tea?
A. Never. As soon as the coffee or tea is stirred, the spoon should be placed in the saucer and remain there.
Q. Is it necessary to acknowledge gifts and cards received during an illness?
A. Yes. If one is too ill to write the notes personally, some member of the family can do so.

F. Burriss and Mrs. John S. Bone, John Fugh of Shedd and L. W. Fraser of Albany, Mr. A. C. Eoff and Mrs. C. B. Benton. A new weekly series starts next Monday.

Cold Comfort

Lone Housekeeper Cooks Food for Six and Freezes it for Future Meals

By Maxine Buren
Statesman Woman's Editor
A complaint made about this department was given to us personally in the grocery store the other day when a reader declared that she expected lots more about freezing things this year and thought we had let her down.
We thought we had bored you with such stories, ever since we purchased our new freezer in July.
But we have done some things lately which we thought practical.

When stuffing peppers for dinner last night, we made three times recipe for one meal and packed them, two together, in plastic bags. They needed no labeling as the contents of the bags are visible.
We've been baking a chocolate cake every few weeks, saving out enough for a day or two for ourselves and freezing the remainder cut in serving sized pieces. We find we like the cake while still frozen even better than fresh.

This Christmas we'll spring a fresh fruit centerpiece for a holiday buffet. We have fresh cherries in the freezer, which were put down with the stems. We plan on putting in several bunches of grapes which are hanging on our vines now, almost ready to be frozen. We have heard that grapes are delicious.

Some experts say that pears freeze well, as raw slices, baked or as sauce.
These pears, according to government specialists, should be cored, sliced lengthwise half inch thick and preheated in boiling syrup for two minutes, then packed and covered with syrup.

Another experiment we tried was a dried prune and peach upside down cornbread. We arranged the slightly cooked dried fruits in the bottom of a pan, poured syrup over them and put cornbread batter on top. When baked the bread was turned over and we ate some. The remainder went into the plastic bags and was frozen.

A project not yet undertaken will be a supply of French onion soup for winter luncheons. Our sweet onions in the garden are not a keeping variety, so we plan to make up considerable amounts of the soup of which we are particularly fond.

All summer we've enjoyed asherbet made from prepared mix and using water instead of milk. We varied the flavors. Using lemon mix as a base, we would add half a can of pineapple, or a cup of mashed fresh peaches, or two bananas. Sometimes we added frozen berries to the mix, using last year's pack until we cleaned out all of the leftovers. Strawberries and raspberries were especially good.

We have found that fruit pies, either baked or unbaked are among our favorites. We plan to put down some chess pies and walnut or filbert ones during the fall. These will be baked before frozen.

Another of our specialties is apple dumplings which we have made and frozen. The dumplings, or cobbler or roly poly or what-have-you are made in individual sized pie tins with biscuit dough. They are baked and then frozen. We can make half a dozen as easily as one.

This business of freezing foods for a one-woman family is mighty handy.

Redmond, grand representative of the state of Kentucky, was honored. Mrs. Una Hill of Florence gave a report on Vista chapter.

Mothers Meet

St. Vincents mothers club met Tuesday in parish hall. Father Ready gave a brief talk. A food sale was to be held Sunday and a parish bazaar to be early in November were discussed. Mrs. Frank Shemak was appointed 7th grade room mother. The sixth grade room was presented attendance award. Mrs. Earl Griepentrog

Visiting Team Due

Neighbors of Woodcraft will meet Friday at 8 o'clock at VFW hall. A district 21 pep meeting is planned, with the grand team from Portland putting on the initiatory work.

Mrs. William J. Busick and daughter, Miss Jeanne Busick, have returned from a several days stay in Portland, where they visited relatives and friends.

headed the refreshment committee for the afternoon.

Camp, Auxiliary Dinner

Hal Hibbard camp and auxiliary, USWV, met at the Salem Woman's clubhouse on Sunday for a 1 o'clock dinner. Presiding at the business meeting which followed were Commander Bert Frohmader and President Lulu Humphrey. Special guests were Mrs. Luke Johnston, clubhouse chairman, and Florence Buckles of Portland, formerly of Salem.

Women's Society of World Service of the First Evangelical United Brethren church will meet tonight at the church parlor at 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. G. L. Lovell is chairman and assisting are Mrs. Faith Leach, Mrs. Floyd Senter and Mrs. Walter Lamkin.

Past presidents of Marions auxiliary 661, Veterans of Foreign Wars will meet with Mrs. Leon Hanson, 160 East Miller street tonight at 8 o'clock.

Maccabees Capitol Tent Hive 84d will meet tonight at Beaver hall for a 6:30 o'clock no-host dinner, followed by a business meeting.
