Wide Variety of New Designs Now for Predecorated Panel Boards on Market

By Sue Gardner
For homemakers who want to restyle their bathrooms, kitchens or children's rooms, there is a wide variety of new designs in pre-decorated panel boards now on the market. The panels are hard pressed and have a baked-on enamel finish that can be kept clean with the use of a damp cloth. The surface is both durable and moisture resistant, two qualities needed in bathroom redecoration.

For the bathroom, the use of metal moldings are recommended with the panel boarding to keep the water from getting behind the panels. The panels can be permanently fixed to both flat and curved surfaces.

The panel board comes in both solid and patterned finishes and can be combined for a variety of effects in the home. A room with high ceilings, often found in older houses, can be given a shorter effect with the use of darker shading on the bottom and patterned or solid light paneling on the top.

Some of the panel boards come with light backgrounds and dark lines in box or plaid effects which can be matched with the darker shade in solid paneling. Two tone effects in solid colors can be achieved with the use of green and pale yellow, light grey and burgundy, or royal blue and cream.

The paneling is also suggested for playrooms and for attic rooms where the infrequent use of the space might mean you have a wall washing problem when you keep the water from getting behind the panels. It is also good for a room that is subject to a good deal of dust and grit from open windows and requires constant washing.
