At Least 'Jess' Was Correct

SWEET HOME — The Sweet Home Kiwanis club secretary knew his group had elected "Jess" as the new vice president — but he apparently wasn't sure which one.

The name of Jess Parker, Sweet Home city manager, inadvertently was listed instead of duly-elected Jess Comer, who is a member of the local police force.

Recreation Group To Help Silverton Police in Clubwork

Statesman News Service
SILVERTON — Men from each organization affiliated with the Silverton Recreation association will be asked to assist the Silverton police in operation of the athletic club. It was believed each organization could furnish assistance for a month during the season.

This club was started by the local police, headed by Chief Victor Grossnickle to provide "something to do" for youths who have no place to go for recreation.

Another winter project of the recreation association is the square dance club. James Nelson, president of the recreation group, reported that equipment has been purchased and sessions in the square dance organization will get underway shortly.

The first meeting of the association this week attracted 18 members, representing various local organizations.

Truth Proves Poor Defense

DENVER, Oct. 12 — (P) — Denver police, like police everywhere, are used to hearing suspected drunks say they had "only two or three beers." They had the surprise of their life tonight.

A motorist involved in a minor auto accident was brought to headquarters. He admitted drinking. "Five or ten drinks?" asked the police surgeon.

"Naw, more than that. I had a couple at home and took the bottle with me."

"Then you consumed about a fifth?"

"No, sir. I buy mine by the quart. I guess I drank it all."

"How long did it take you?"

"How should I know. I don't time myself when I'm drinking." He failed the sobriety test.
