Born April 6, 1871, at Kokomo, Ind., Bond moved to Washington in 1883 and later to Forest Grove where he was graduated from Pacific university in 1892. He taught school for many years and was at one time school superintendent of Washington county.

Bond was married in 1898 in Chehalis, Wash., to Harriet A. Lucas who died last year. The couple came to Salem in 1915. Bond resided recently at 1290 Oak st.

The deceased was an active member of Jason Lee Methodist church where he taught Sunday school.

Workers Pay Shows Climb

Earnings of covered workers increased in every important industry during 1949, but were confined principally to construction, food processing, transportation, warehousing, utilities and retail trade, the state unemployment compensation commission announced here Friday.

The median annual wages reached $1,569 for approximately 481,000 workers while for 241,290 regular workers with earnings in all four quarters the median was well above $3,000 as compared with $2,957 in 1948.

The average wage for regular workers advanced to or stayed over the $250 a month mark in practically all main industries but the exact figure could not be calculated because of lack of data on individual earnings over $3,000 which are not taxable.

Insurance Firm to Test Soliciting Law in Court

The long-expected suit to bar the city of Salem from requiring solicitors' licenses for insurance agents was filed Friday in Marion county circuit court.

Plaintiffs are Metropolitan Life Insurance company of New York and one of its Salem agents, Edward J. Burnside, whose arrest last March brought on a test case of the city ordinance.

The complaint names as defendants the city, Mayor R. L. Elfstrom, City Attorney Chris J. Kowitz, Chief of Police Clyde A. Warren, City Manager J. L. Franzen and the eight members of the city council.

The judgment sought is one to declare that the city has no right to require insurance agents to be licensed by the city, regardless of their means of solicitation. Core of the contention is that the city's ordinance is illegal, as pertains to insurance companies and agents, because all must already be licensed by the state.

Burnside was charged with violation of a 1948 city ordinance prohibiting door-to-door soliciting without a license. The case has not been settled finally in municipal court, although the court overruled defendant's demurrer holding that insurance men were not subject to city regulation because of state licensing.

Pending further litigation, the city council issued a temporary order permitting insurance salesman to operate here without city licenses.

Baruch Raps Slow Efforts At Rearing

ROCHESTER, Minn., Oct. 20 (AP)—Bernard M. Baruch said here the nation's "limping approach" to mobilization encourages new Soviet adventures.

Two-year all-out program, coupled with stiff home-front measures to combat inflation.

The 80-year-old financier and adviser to several presidents, whose relations with President Truman have been cool in recent months, listed six steps he said are necessary to insure peace:

1. Mobilize all-out for the next two years, until we have balanced Russia's rearming.
2. Creation of a single, temporary, over-all, independent, coordinating mobilization agency, reporting directly to the president.
3. Set up under it a thorough-going priority system.
4. Provide a general ceiling over all prices, wages, rents, fees and other charges.
5. Provide an appeal board to adjust all unfair hardships.
6. Make taxes heavy enough to pay the full cost of defense and to eliminate profiteering.

Baruch expressed his views in a speech prepared for delivery at the Plummer-Judd memorial lecture at Mayo Clinic here.

Expiration of Chauffeur's Licenses Near

All Oregon chauffeurs' licenses, aggregating 50,000, will expire December 31, Secretary of State Earl T. Newbery has reminded.

He urged early renewal of these licenses to avoid last minute confusion.

License officials reminded that although regular driving permits now expire every two years on the holder's birth date all chauffeur permits still expire at the end of each year.

The renewal fee continues at $1. Delay will occur in obtaining 1951 permits if the applicants have allowed their regular drivers' license to expire, Newbery said.

Two Divisions Reach Top in Chest Drives

It was "Ed's day" Friday at the Salem Community chest report luncheon, as two division leaders who had gone "over the top" received recognition. The reports totaled $97,523, or 88 per cent of the $111,000 goal.

Campaign Chairman A. C. Haag gave "red feathered" statuettes to Edward Majek, who led the professional division, and to Edwin Schroeder and Fred Keeler, who captained the general gifts group, a total of $10,594.90.

Divisions which had reached into the final 10 per cent toward their quotas were automotive, industrial and mercantile. Several reported finding a "new lease on life" from unexpected gifts.

Alfred W. Loucks, president of Salem chest, pointed out that some divisions already had set all-time pledge records, but reminded that the chest - supported agencies would be hurt badly if any cut is required in their budgets because of chest failure.

Next report luncheon was set for Wednesday, instead of Tuesday.

One provides for increasing the pay of legislators to $600 a year while the other permits the state board of higher education to issue state obligation bonds in lieu of revenue bonds at a lower rate of interest.
