Spun Aluminum Pans Made of Single Piece of Metal to Avoid Dents, Cracks

By Sue Gardner A wide range of spun aluminum pans, each made of a single piece of metal to avoid dents, cracks or crevices where dirt can hide, is now on the market. A boon to home bakers, the pans are designed for variety of baked goods from angle cakes to popovers. A group of round pans with graduated cones for coffee cakes, ring or angle cakes have the cones scaled to allow for oven heat distribution necessary for deep pan cakes. There are also a number of pans for upside down cake. These have shallower sides, but have a wide bottom center indentation, so that when they are turned over on the plate there put fruit and other fillings for fancy cakes.

pans for molds of various types, and the collection of spun aluminum pieces also has a group of individual molds for making gelatin, aspics, and custard pies and shells. A six and a twelve size popover or shell pan can also be had in the same material. Muffin pans range from tiny sizes for the dainty party muffins to extre deep and wide muffin tins.

A special pie plate is featured of the one-piece spun aluminum with an extra outside ridge that will catch any overflow from fruit or other juicy pies, so you do not have to worry about overflow spilling into your oven. An advantage of these aluminum pans is that they bake quickly and cool quickly, so that you can use a uick mixing recipe of a ready cake mix and decorate it in short order when you have unexpected guests.

On Etiquette By Roberta Lee

Q. Does the father of a widow or divorcee, who is marrying for the second time, give her away? A. Yes; her father gives her away precisely as he did at the first marriage. And her family again assumes all expenses of the wedding, unless she prefers to meet them herself. Q. When one is dining in self-service cafeteria, is it necessary to tip the waitress who carries one's tray from the counter to the table? A. No, this isn't necessary, although some people do.

Q. Is it proper for a man to conduct a woman across a room
