spent two or three hours in his partment when he didn't voice more than ten sentences. On e day he walked five holes on a golf course without even the customary "nice shot" to his companions. Later he confes-sed he was lining up his pitching in his mind for a series two weeks

Golf on an off-day is the Richards way of clearing the cobwebs from his thinking process. He shoots in the mid-70s. On a particularly good day when his tee shots were carrying 260 yards, he can reach even par. One of his favorite golfing companions in Texas is Dizzy Dean. He also has played with such cracks as Ben Hogan, Sam Byrd, Sammy Snead and Al

Watrous.
In late August of 1949 the Bufffalo Bisons, protecting a slim lead, invaded Rochester. The pennant was at stake. In the Red Wings' dressing room, Manager Johnny Keane delivered a pep talk. A reporter said to Richards: "Aren't way going to make a speech to you going to make a speech to your ball club, reminding them, This is it, tonight. You do or die

So that he could be overheard by several of his players, Richards replied: "Nothing I can say now will help us, A fight talk may hurt some of our men. If we're not ready now, we don't deserve to win. But I think we'll win."
