Cashing In Nut Crops Now Come in Handy for Christmas Gifts to Eastern Relatives

By Maxine Buren
Statesman Woman's Editor

It now comes that time of year when Oregonians cash in on the home crops and make them do for Christmas gifts.

Especially I mean walnut and filbert crops.

Back yard trees more than pay their way when it's gift giving time, particularly for eastern and mid-western relatives who appreciate products from the northwest.

Back yard trees more than pay their way when it's gift giving time. Walnuts or filberts can be sent in the shell of course, when they are nicely dried and look good, but many persons with a tree or two find that their drying methods produce some which are mildewed or otherwise unusable. It isn't always easy to tell the good from the bad so they shell them out.

Shelled nuts are just as much or more appreciated by the recipients and of course the freight is less but the work greater.

The shelled nuts can be shipped plain for cooking and eating purposes or can be candied or spiced. Here are some recipes for candying the nuts, they do for either walnuts or filberts.

SPICED NUTS

1 cup sugar
3/4 cup water
1 teaspoon cinnamon

1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon each cloves and ginger

1 cup nuts

Cook all but nuts together to 238 degrees or to medium soft ball (so it holds its shape) when tried in cold water. Add nuts and heat over a slow fire until syrup starts to granulate, stir gently. Separate nuts on cookie sheet and let cool.

Then there are glazed nuts that have no spices and are a different consistency:

GLAZE NUTS

2 cups sugar
1 cup water

1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
Nutmeats

Boil ingredients except nuts, without stirring, until syrup cracks when tried in cold water (305 degrees). Keep sugar washed down from the sides of the pan. Remove saucepan from fire at once, place in larger pan of cold water to stop the boiling. Remove from cold water and place in hot water. Dip nuts separately on toothpicks, place on tin sheet to cool.

To salt walnuts, boil the kernels in water for 30 seconds. Drain, arrange in a shallow baking pan and bake at 425 for 10 minutes. Add butter to pan and bake another 5 minutes. Sprinkle liberally with salt.

You can make another nice confection using walnuts, and that is stuffed dates. Merely remove the seed, replace with a half walnut meat and dip in powdered sugar.

If you've a rather large (or small for that matter) amount of shelled nuts to store, keep them in tin or glass jars in a cool dry place. They will keep for considerable time and remain fresh, but be sure they are thoroughly dried so they won't draw the moisture.

One pound of walnuts ordinarily shells out to about one-half pound or two cups.
