2 Youngsters Treated for Scalp Wounds

Two Salem youngsters were treated by the Salem first aid squad Tuesday night for minor scalp wounds incurred in home accidents.

First aid men said Lee Chamber, 3, who lives at 255 E. Myers st., apparently was wrestling with a chair about 8:45 p. m. when the chair fell on top of him and punctured his right temple. Two hours earlier, four-year-old David Wendell, who lives at 3245 Abrams ave., fell against a door and incurred a similar wound.

In another accident, Helene Kilgore, Seal Rock, Ore., received a possibly fractured left arm when she fell while visiting at 532 N. High st. First aid men took her to Salem General hospital where she was reported in good condition.

Hayesville Parents Learn Of Son's Safety

HAYESVILLE, Dec. 20 — Mr. and Mrs. Charles Andresen of Hayesville learned this week that their son, Sgt. Paul Andresen, is safe after fighting with the 2nd division on the Yalu river against the communist army in Korea. Sergeant Andresen, in a letter to his parents, said he lost everything in the unit's withdrawal except the clothing he was wearing. He reported about 50 per cent of his division killed or wounded. He is now stationed near Seoul. Andresen's wife, the former Kitty Mowry, is living in Vancouver, Wash., with their four children. Both Andresen and his wife were graduated from Hayesville grade school and attended Salem high school.

People in Veterans Hospitals, Institution Inmates, Welfare Cases Need Yuletide Cheer

By Winston Taylor
Asst. City Editor, The Statesman

It's not too late to do some Christmas shopping for people who need not only the gifts but the attention and consideration that lie behind them—the aged in care homes, children in foster homes and veterans in hospitals are representative of this group.

If you can't help before Christmas, their needs go on throughout the year.

For war veterans in hospitals at Portland and Vancouver the gift suggestions came from local veterans' organizations, with which items may be left for delivery. They include cigarettes, cookies, candy, playing cards, stationery and stamps, puzzles, books and magazines, personal items such as shaving material and handkerchiefs.

In addition, the Portland hospital has a room of children's toys, books and other needs which the veterans may choose to send their children.

Suggestions Made
Marion county welfare office makes the distribution to the aged, the foster children and others whose public checks don't provide the little extras that make December 25 Christmas. Workers have made these suggestions for gifts that individuals or groups can secure for persons who have no families or no one to care. Those with relatives often are well taken care of, adding to the disappointment of others.

Nearly 200 persons are on welfare grants in Marion county convalescent or care homes for the aged. For the convalescents, who may be either bedfast or partly ambulatory, the gifts might be bed jackets or gowns, individual games that can be played in bed or in a chair, books and magazines and radios.

Others in care homes can use clothing (especially men's), materials for quilt pieces, yarn for knitting and crocheting, crossword and jigsaw puzzles.

Pleasure Rides
One instance in which interested persons could give individual attention is in taking residents of the homes to church or for pleasure rides.

For the approximately 100 children in more than 50 foster homes of the county, the welfare office will see that the "parents" receive the gifts, to be put under the tree, as they would be for their own children. The homes themselves are "average," but the children include those who have been taken by the court from their natural parents because of home conditions and those who have shown delinquency but are being given another chance to overcome it.

They need the things that other children get for Christmas, and the age range is full, from infancy to 18 years. To fit the age and the need, welfare workers select from donations, including toys, games, books, scrapbooks, personal items and clothing, which should be clean and wearable.

Damage Suit Asks $26,082

A taxicab passenger involved in an October traffic accident filed suit Wednesday in Marion county circuit court for $25,000 general and $1,082 special damages because of her alleged injuries.

Samantha H. Baker sued Eleanor Staab, owner of Shorty's Cabs, and Edward Hildebrand, driver of the cab in which she was riding on October 11. The complaint alleges that the cab failed to stop in time at Capitol and Center streets to avoid crashing into another car stopped for the traffic light.

The result, the complaint alleges, were bruises to head and body, partial paralysis of the right hand and arm for a month, nervous shock and severe pain.
