Waffles on Menu Now That New Iron Available; Variety For Use is Wide

By Maxine Buren
Statesman Woman's Editor

We've had a secret all these years, one we've kept quite well, but now it can be told.

We never had a waffle iron. Vacuum sweepers, automobiles, running water and even a home freezer—but never a waffle iron until recently. Not being proud, we are frank to admit that it is a castoff from friends, more affluent than ourselves, who, somewhat in the mode of the man who buys a new car every few years, had purchased a new and more modern model of iron and has given the old one to us.

But it makes waffles and we are having a wonderful time, being not entirely ignorant on the subject because we've had waffle irons in the family including such recipes as sour milk, raised, chocolate and sweet potato waffles.

The raised waffles go something like this:

RAISED WAFFLES

1 1/2 cups scalded milk      2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon salt          2 egg whites
1 tablespoon butter      1/4 cake yeast in
2 cups flour              1/4 cup lukewarm water

Add salt and butter to the milk, when lukewarm add dissolved yeast cake and the flour. Beat well. Let rise overnight. Add egg yolks that have been beaten, and fold in stiffly beaten whites. If whole yeast cake is used, mixture will rise in 1 1/2 hours. Makes 9 to 12 waffles.

There's an old recipe we've had for many years for

GINGERBREAD WAFFLES

1 cup molasses            1 egg
1/2 cup butter              3 cups flour
1 1/2 teaspoons soda        2 teaspoons ginger
1/2 cup sour milk          1/2 teaspoon salt

Heat butter and molasses to boiling point, remove from fire and add soda. Beat in the milk, egg, dry ingredients and bake. Serve with whipped cream.

In a Roquefort cheese box we find this recipe:

WAFFLES WITH ROQUEFORT

1 egg                        2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup flour                2 tablespoons shortening
2 teaspoons baking powder    1/4 cup milk
Pinch of salt              4 tablespoons Roquefort cheese

Beat egg until light, add flour, salt, baking powder and sugar. Mix cheese into milk and add to dry ingredients, add melted shortening. Baked on greased waffle iron. Serve with butter and maple syrup.

Waffles can not only be used on breakfast or late supper menus but lend themselves well to serving with creamed dishes. They make shortcake, using fresh, frozen or canned fruits and the sweet kinds serve as cake or cookies.

On Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it necessary for me to invite the minister who officiates at my daughter's wedding to the wedding reception?

A. This would depend upon the size of the wedding. If it is to be a very large wedding, then both the minister and his wife (if he has one) should be invited. If, however, the wedding is a small one for relatives and intimate friends, an invitation is not necessary.

Q. Is it necessary to repeat the name of a person to whom you have just been introduced, as, "How do you do, Mr. Brown?"

A. Yes, this is always good form. It indicates that one has paid strict heed to the introduction and is more sincerely pleased at the meeting.

Q. What is the proper level to which water glasses for the dinner table should be filled?

A. They should be more than about three-fourths full.

More for Your Money

Iron Furniture in Oriental, Modern Styles Used as Accessories in Home

By Sue Gardner

There has been an increasing interest in the use of iron furniture and accessories in the home. At one time metal furniture was used primarily for gardens or porches, then it was combined with plastics for use in dining rooms. Some men and women house owners liked the outdoor feeling of glass and wrought iron combinations; these have appeared in dining room areas beside large picture windows.

The latest combination of iron pieces appears in the creations of Harry Lawenda, who has achieved an Oriental air in his modern iron pieces by combining theme with upholstery fabrics. His most unusual piece is a modern, squared-off looking arm chair with the back set low and the upholstered section tilted forward for comfort. The frame of the chair is in an inch-and-a-half square iron tubing, polished to a smooth ebony finish. The back is adjustable to pressure by means of concealed spring steel tapes.

Another chair has a woven wire wing-back frame and a foam rubber slip-on seat. This designer also uses small iron tubing, some as thin as half inch widths, for lamp frames. His lamp shades feature a variety of Oriental papers for a new note.

Tables in the collection include coffee, bridge, and small occasional tables, rectangular in shape from ten and a half to twenty-seven inches in height. A bridge table, thirty inches square, has a textured glass top with white or ebony finish to the metal. Other tables have bamboo veneer tops.
