AAUW Branch Hears Miss Beardsley

Miss Florence E. Beardsley, state director of elementary education, was the guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Salem branch, American Association of University Women Saturday afternoon in the Capital room of the Senator hotel.
 Miss Beardsley reported on the Mid-Century White House Conference on Children and Youth held in Washington, D.C. in December. The theme of the conference, development of a healthy personality, led to the enthusiastic discussion of causes and suggestions for eliminating strains in present day living. Miss Beardsley pointed out that one trend is toward early marriage, often before the income is sufficient for the needs of a family. More wives and mothers then find it necessary to work outside the home. Poor housing creates many strains, which result in juvenile delinquency, tuberculosis, pneumonia and truancy, listed in order of decreasing importance. Nearly four million families have only one parent, but contrary to popular opinion death and necessity for work away from home rank far ahead of divorce in causing this situation.

Although no recommendations have yet come from the conference, Miss Beardsley felt that many suggestions to be made have already been considered or adopted by Oregon workers. One of our greatest problems because of their movement throughout the state. Possibly one-third of Oregon children change schools each year.
 Mrs. Ervin Potter, president of the Salem branch, presided at the meeting, and announced that Bennett Cerf, president of Random House and Modern Library, and noted author, humorist and columnist, would appear in Salem on March 1 at the high school auditorium under the sponsorship of the Salem branch, AAUW. Mrs. Jason Lee is heading the committee for the event.

More for Your Money New Product for Resurfacing and Insulating a Long Wearing Finish

By Sue Gardner
 Homemakers who are renovating their homes or building new ones will be interested in a product for resurfacing and insulating wood, clapwood, masonry or shingles. The product is waterproof and contains asbestos and mica, providing a long wearing finish.
 One reason for the lasting quality of this product is that it is not nailed on like many siding materials, but is fused to the surface to be resurfaced, by specially designed pressure equipment. Although it is the type of work usually done by professional laborers, a home-maker who can handle a pressure gun for air-blasting can do the job himself. The process puts a surface that is one-sixteenth of an inch thick on the existing material and becomes an actual part of the original structure. The finished job provides both insulation and new surfacing.
 The resurfacing gives the appearance of stucco, but not quite so pebbly a texture. It comes in seven custom colors and while giving a new look to the surface it will not hide or alter any of the original lines or contours.
 A new type of rotary contact painter has come on the market and it can be used for home painting without the need of a tray or pan. The roller, made of a series of driplets, sterilized animal hair discs, applies the paint evenly and can be dipped in a gallon can of oil, water or emulsion paint just like a brush.

Distinguished Visitor Ernest Bloch, Conducting Own Works Here Tuesday, Outstanding Composer

Honors have come frequently to Ernest Bloch, composer, who will appear with the Portland symphony on Tuesday night. The most recent is the six-day Ernest Bloch festival arranged last December by the Chicago symphony and other musical groups of that city. His guest conductor several times.
 Born in Geneva in 1880, young Ernest Bloch studied with eminent masters in Europe and at 21 wrote his Symphony No. 1 which has been rated by some as one of the most important works of the modern school. Moving to Paris, Bloch found that city furnished him excitement but little else. It is believed that the young composer's struggle for success during this period furnished Romain Rolland with material for part of his great novel on the life of a composer "Jean Christophe."
 Unsuccessful from a monetary standpoint, he was obliged to return to Switzerland, where he worked with his father, a clock merchant by day, and as a student and composer by night.
 Bloch first came to America in 1918 and was immediately thrilled by the vigor and youthfulness of the country. In 1917 Karl Muck of the Boston Symphony orchestra invited him to conduct his Three Jewish poems (which he will conduct here) and the Friends of Music in New York gave a full Bloch program.
 He did a year's teaching at the David Mannes school in New York, Cleveland Institute of Music and San Francisco conservatory. His American symphony won the musical America award for outstanding American Symphonic work.
 In the 1930s he received a subsidy which enabled him to devote all of his time in composing and he spent most of this period in Switzerland, France and Italy. He returned to the United States in 1934 and in 1940 settled in Oregon where he purchased the Asahel Bush summer home at Agate Beach. It was here that he composed the second of two works to be played here Tuesday, The Suite Symphonique.
 Tickets for the Tuesday concert, which will feature Ernest Bloch, may be purchased at the United States National bank ticket booth or at the door of the Salem high school auditorium prior to the concert. The Portland symphony is under James Sample's direction.

On Etiquette By Roberta Lee

Q. When two men and two women are together, what is the order in which they should enter a restaurant?
 A. The women both enter first, and are followed by the men, and in this order they follow the host waiter to their table. The women also precede when departing from the restaurant.
 Q. When an engagement has been broken, should the two persons involved return all presents?
 A. Yes; the man is expected to return all presents, letters and photographs he may have received from his fiancée, and she, of course, does likewise.
 Q. Where should one place the pits when eating olives?
 A. Place the pits on the side of the dinner or the bread and butter plate.

Designing Woman

LOOK FOR A LAMP
 The idea of looking for a different lamp is a good one. Distinctive lamps do more than their share to dress up a room and give it style. But too many people, looking for different lamps, come up with ruffe-shaded coffee grinders, coal buckets, high bottom shoes—lamps made from anything that was never intended to be a lamp, and all too many of these oddities appear in rooms that are otherwise tastefully and conservatively furnished. The different lamp need not be an excursion into Never-never land. You can find it in classic, sense-making proportions like this. These lamps are different because they use different materials, very skillfully, however in simple ways. The shade on the upper left baluster base lamp is covered with bronze screen wire to give it sparkle. The lamp below it has an oval base that is covered in intricately woven rope. A simple geometric form of solid cork forms the base of the third lamp. And unlike tricky lamps, which are almost always inefficient, these lamps are 31 to 35 inches tall to give good light.
