Germ Warfare Myths Checked By State CDA

Elimination of widespread myths about so-called germ warfare is one of the purposes of educational information being distributed by Oregon state civil defense agency.

The literature explodes the common idea that great masses of people could be killed by enemy attack with germs and poisons and terms as foolish talk the idea that new types of germs have been discovered so powerful a thimble-full could kill millions of people.

Biological warfare would employ living agents such as plant-killing insects; poisons or "toxins" such as those that come from bacteria; and special kinds of chemicals.

Attacks could be aimed at people, animals, or food crops. But the defense agency points out that the U.S. already has a nation-wide system to prevent and control disease outbreaks and the network covers crops and livestock as well.

The agency lists some of the ways disease germs could be spread. Aerosols, floating the germs in fine sprays or mists is one of the possibilities. Others include blowing germs from a spray gun into the air intake of a factory ventilating system or in specially designed bombs.

Level-headedness and common sense lead the list for protection in the event of biological attack. Don't take chances and don't start rumors are special warnings issued by civil defense agencies.

The agency is rapidly preparing for necessary action in event of germ warfare. Plans to meet any emergency are being formulated to put into effect neighborhood and personal health measures for both guarding against and meeting biological warfare.

Normal hygienic measures are described as the most effective by the agency as precautions after a biological raid. Keep well covered. Wash clothes and body, and be careful what you eat and drink are primary rules issued for civil defense.

ARC Services Include Armed Forces Work

Services to the armed forces, to veterans and dependents of both groups and to civilians in times of emergency are some of the phases handled through the home service department of the American Red Cross.

A substantial portion of funds in each Red Cross chapter are set aside for the home service work, as services to the armed forces and veterans being mandatory under the Red Cross charter.

In the Marion county chapter the caseload for the first two months of 1951 has totaled 343 in the home service department.

Breaking down the total, 35 of the cases were assistance in sending wires to verify necessary leaves for men in the armed forces. Cases of families seeking Red Cross help in finding out about men in the armed forces, or requests from the military regarding conditions at home amounted to 54 for the two months.

Assistance with compensation or pension applications totaled 47. Counseling service was given for 90 cases in the two months.

Financial assistance for service-men's families amounted to 36 cases for the two months. Varied other counseling and assistance cases were handled during the months, including several reports to be filled out for other Red Cross chapters.

Expense of the emergency communications and reports is borne by the Red Cross chapter as part of its services to men in the armed forces and their families, as is the financial assistance in emergencies to tide families over until allotments arrive. The chapter does not function as a welfare agency, but is obligated to give emergency assistance at any call.

Mrs. Ada Condit, Member of Pioneer Valley Family, Dies

Mrs. Ada Lillian Condit, daughter of Oregon pioneers and a life-long resident of the Willamette valley, died at her Salem residence, 1625 Center st., early Thursday, following a confining illness of several weeks.

She would have been 84 years old two weeks from today. Mrs. Condit, native of Peoria in Linn county, was the daughter of the John Quincy Adams Worths.

Her father was a pioneer merchant of Linn county; her mother was a daughter of the Rev. Edward R. Geary, a Presbyterian minister sent to Oregon to establish churches. The Rev. Geary also served under the U. S. government as superintendent of Indian affairs for the Oregon territorial government and became first president of Albany college, now the Lewis and Clark college of Portland.

She was united in marriage to Alva O. Condit, then a young attorney practicing at Salem, and they made their home at 855 Oak st. until March 22, 1925, when he died. Mrs. Condit continued to reside in the family home until recently.

The Condits had no children. Two brothers, Joseph E. Worth, former Portland druggist, and Edward G. Worth, former U. S. surveyor general for Oregon, preceded her in death.

Survivors are nephew, Geary H. Worth, with the Oregon highway commission at Eugene, and Mrs. Miriam Pulliam, The Dalles.

Mrs. Condit and her late husband had long been members of Salem First Presbyterian church. Funeral services will be conducted by Dr. Chester W. Hamblin, minister of that church, in Clough Barrick chapel Monday at 1:30 p.m. Commitment will be in the Condit cemetery at Pleasant Grove, near Aumsville.

The commission also recommended to the legislature that it be allowed to fix the salary of the commission director, who hasn't been chosen yet.

Another new recommendation is that the legislature authorize the state bond commission to invest the blind commission's $100,000 in trust funds.

Hunter Named New Director Of Crime Lab

New acting director of the state crime laboratory at the University of Oregon medical school is Dr. Warren C. Hunter, professor and head of the department of pathology at the medical school.

Announcement was made jointly by Dr. David W. E. Baird, dean of the medical school, and H. G. Mason, superintendent of state police. His appointment is effective until July 1. At that time, Dr. Homer H. Harris will take over duties as director of the crime detection laboratory.

Dr. Harris served his internship at San Bernardino County hospital in California after graduating from the University of Oregon medical school in 1945. After service in the air force he returned to the medical school and there has specialized in pathology.

Dr. Hunter succeeds Dr. Howard Richardson, Eugene, who resigned several weeks ago. His resignation was received by Mason during a legislative committee discussion of a bill to take the crime detection laboratory away from the state police department.

21 Counties Meet Modified TB Ratings

Twenty-one Oregon counties have satisfied the state and federal requirements for official recognition as tuberculosis modified accredited areas, Dr. H. R. Young, state veterinarian, reports.

This means that tuberculin tests of cattle conducted in each county during the last three years have shown that less than one-half of one per cent of the cattle in the county have bovine tuberculosis. Tests were made by official veterinarians.

Re-accreditation of counties for tuberculosis is carried on under cooperative agreements between the US bureau of animal industry and the Oregon state department of agriculture, division of animal industry. Among the 21 counties are the Willamette valley counties, Marion, Polk, Clackamas, Linn, Yamhill and Benton.
