Smut Control Necessary in Valley Wheat

By Lillie L. Madsen, Farm Editor, The Statesman

Whether you live in eastern Oregon where huge quantities of wheat are being grown, or if you live in the Willamette valley, where only small plantings are made, wheat seed should be treated to resist smut, A. O. Steenland, Oregon State college extension plant pathologist, reminded growers Friday.

He added that he expected an unusually large acreage of wheat to be planted throughout Oregon this spring. A number of fields, even after the seed received some treatment last season, showed indication of smut, Steenland reported.

There are, he explained, two serious smut diseases of wheat present in Oregon: Common smut, sometimes called "hant," which has been present in Oregon for years, and Dwarf smut, which is newer. Treating seed controls common smut but not dwarf smut.

The fungus which causes dwarf smut may live in the soil for several years before infecting wheat. Planting seed that has dwarf smut spores sticking to it is one sure way to introduce the disease into a field, the specialist said.

Seed treatment, although not recommended, will kill dwarf smut spores that stick to the seed, and thus helps keep a field smut-free.

Dwarf smut does not attack spring planted grain. Spring planted grain is susceptible to common smut, but the degree of infection is usually lower than when planted in the fall.

Steenland said anyone of the following materials will control common smut on the seed wheat when spring planted: New Improved Ceresan, analyzing one ounce per bushel; Ceresan M, one ounce per bushel; copper carbonate (50 per cent) two ounces per bushel; basic copper sulphate, two ounces per bushel.

These are dust treatments, he added. Ceresan M may also be used as a wet or slurry treatment by following the manufacturers' recommendations. Seed treated with either of the Ceresans should be kept in bags or covered for at least 24 hours. This lets the gases from these materials act upon the smut spores.

While it is many years since wheat has been a major crop in the Willamette valley, there is no reason to let the little that is grown here become "smut-ized," Steenland says. More will be planted here this spring than usual, it is expected.

Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, also perfected cylinders and discs of wax for the phonograph.

AVRAM DORYON

Israeli Movie Star to Speak at Temple Tonight

Avram Doryon, leading Israeli motion picture star, will speak for the United Jewish Appeal in Salem's Temple Beth Shalom tonight at 8 o'clock, according to Harry Weinstein, local chairman.

Funds raised in the appeal are used for rehabilitation and resettlement programs in the three-year-old state of Israel, as well as aiding oppressed and poverty-stricken Jews in other lands. His work in Israel cuts across lines of creed, said Weinstein.

Doryon, who went from Germany to Palestine in 1935, has been with theatre and film companies most of the time since. During World War II he fought with the Palestine regiment, later known as the Jewish brigade, and organized the Theatrical party, similar to the USO for entertainment. He is now in Los Angeles doing research for the Israeli movie industry and establishing a professional Jewish theatre.

Final Services for George Blanchard Set at Oregon City

Final rites for George G. Blanchard, 78, former Salem resident and city employe, will be held at 1:30 p.m. Monday at Oregon City where he had lived for the past six years.

Blanchard, who died Friday night, lived at Salem for 20 years and worked for the city street department. He was born April 24, 1872 at Redwood Falls, Minn.

Surviving are his widow, Olive, and three sons, Harry Blanchard, Salem, Charles Blanchard, Dallas, and William Blanchard, Canby. Interment will be at Rose City cemetery, Portland, with direction by Hollman & Hawkins mortuary, Oregon City.

Navy Air Units To Go on Paid Status July 1

Conversion of Salem's naval air reserve program from volunteer to paid (organized) status, effective July 1, was announced Saturday by Lt. Stanley Fallander, executive officer of the naval air facility at McNary field.

Three units of 25 officers and 30 enlisted men each have been recruited for Salem. Physical examinations will begin April 15, to be held Sundays and Wednesday nights.

Word of the change, decommissioning all volunteer units, was brought back from Seattle by Fallander and Lt. Comdr. Wallace Hug, commanding officer. Members were being sent notification yesterday of how the conversion may affect them.

Under the new program each unit will have a mandatory week-end training each month. The training program will be similar to that used now, to maintain basic aptitude in familiarization with planes, instrument flying and communications. Calls to active duty would continue to be on an individual status, not by unit.

Members will be screened as to navy background and reserve participation and must be approved before taking physicals. They are now being asked if they want to join an organized unit on pay status, associated with an organized unit as a volunteer (gaining credit for retirement and promotion) or be in a volunteer pool under district command (and still be able to fly here).

In addition to paid week-end training, members and volunteers will be able to fly during the week.

The new groups, designated as auxiliary air units, will include 25 pilots, 3 ground officers and 30 enlisted men. They will be made up principally from the 175 pilots, 25 ground officers and 30 enlisted men now belonging to the Salem and Portland volunteer units, both using McNary field.

The facility has requested two more airplanes to add to its two twin-engine and five single-engine craft, and six more station-keepers to augment the regular staff of two officers and 21 enlisted men.

Mrs. Gragg Appointed Polio Council Secretary

Mrs. Albert C. Gragg is the new secretary of the Marion County Polio council, directors reported Friday. She succeeds Lucille Satter who is moving to Portland.

The council reported $4,408 on March 31. Recent contributions reported were Junior Chamber of Commerce, $50; Dairy Cooperative association, $15; and Oregon State Employees association (one chapter) $12.

Court Convictions For Traffic Law Violations Climb

Court convictions for violations of Oregon traffic laws increased 32 per cent in the first three months of this year, Secretary of State Earl T. Newbry reports.

Reports of convictions, required by law to be filed with the secretary of state, totaled 8,609 from January through March as compared with 6,528 during the same period in 1950, Newbry said.

Driving while intoxicated cost 218 persons their driver's licenses in March. Under Oregon law, the secretary of state is required to revoke the license of anyone convicted of this offense.

Tightening of Labor Market On Schedule

Additional manpower needs of from 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 before the end of 1951 will be felt in a tightening labor market in every section of the nation, according to speakers at the second annual institute of the Oregon chapter of International Association of Public Employment Services.

About 150 chapter members, including many from Salem, attended one or more of five institute sessions ending Saturday on the campus of Lewis and Clark college in Portland.

Prominent speakers included Glenn Brockway of San Francisco and A. F. Hardy of Seattle, both regional officers of the Bureau of Employment Security; Helen Wood of Washington, D. C., from the U. S. bureau of labor statistics; and Dr. George Topping, also of Washington and representing the manpower section of Secretary of State George Marshall.

Stepping up of the defense program from the current 8 per cent of the nation's economy to about 15 to 20 per cent in the next year will require from three to four million workers. The armed forces will take at least a million, and increased farm production will need at least half a million, it was estimated.

Although Oregon has not yet felt much effect of the defense production, its manufacturers have increased employment in the past 12 months even more rapidly than California and Washington, according to Brockway. The armed forces will take only one in 72 of the nation's male population under the present program, it was said.

Guy Lang of Eugene, employment office manager, was named new president of the IAPES chapter, succeeding Eldon Cone of Salem.

Maple Tree Tavern Robbed

Burglars scooped up $230 at the Maple Tree tavern, 495 Edgewater st., in an early-morning break-in, city police reported Saturday. A .22 revolver and a small amount of merchandise also were reported stolen.

Investigating city detectives said the burglars entered through a northeast window, took $40 from a coin-operated bowling device, $20 from a "shoot the bear" machine and $170 which the proprietor had cached in the tavern.
