Spokane's currently visiting Indians are bragging up the fact that their Ken Richardson is one of the best golfers in minor league baseball today because he shoots in the seventies consistently. True enough Ken is a rare bird, as most ballgamers as golfers are strictly

Epworth leaguers. But if the Spokes would care to produce a bit of betting moola, they'd find a few quick takers on the Salem club whose sheckels would say that Rawbone Ray McNulty would knock the knickers right off Richardson. McNulty definitely is anything but a green pea around the links himself, and at times bangs out a 68 just to see if he's still in touch with his game . . . The Spokes might also toss in their worst golfer for a duel with Bill Bevens. Bev shoots in the seventies too. For nine holes, that is . . . Wayne Scott, Silverton grad who coached Klamath Falls high to a state cage tourney title before the war, is the new hoop mentor at Eastern Oregon college. Rasslin' Midgets Booked for Armory Soon

We've had rasslin' bears, alligators and, among other spectacularities the muscled version of "The Thing" during Maestro Elton Owen's Tuesday night parties at the armory. There hardly ever is a dull moment in the joint on wrestling night and its participants can be rightfully accused of touching off more fireworks than the GI guardsmen themselves during their basement target practices.

Another chapter is to soon be added. Owen is bringing in four wrestling midgets within the next couple of weeks, all of them 40inchers weighing around 100 pounds and smash hits on television shows. Little Beaver, Irish Jackie, Tom Thumb and Pancho the Bull are the names of the mighty mites. They aren't only muscularly constructed like normal sized rasslers, but also know the holds and other tricks of the mat trade.

They'll amount to quite a show, as Owen has the admirable habit of insisting on nothing short of same for his weekly productions . .
