"Taking a hike" these days is most generally a method of inviting someone to get lost, depart, move on or just plain disappear. Inasmuch as hiking in this era of autos, bicycles and piggy-backing is a forgotten art not much mention of it, in technical form, is made. But to one Paul Smith of Mill City, who is also known as Oregon's walking man, taking a hike is an item that would make most folks' corns pop right through their shoes. For example, Smith last weekend gave with what he termed a "century" walk of 100 miles —from Pilot Butte Inn at Bend to the Davis airport between Gates and Mill City-merely as a side-light for the port's Aviation Day

Now 66 years old and weighing a solid 190 pounds, Smith isn't tak-ing up hiking as a pastime in his later years. Back in 1911 he walked and ran from Bend to Burns, 164 miles, in 22 hours and 11 minuntes. In 1929 he walked from Salem to Portland and back again in 16 hours and 25 minutes. A miner near Quartsville in Linn county, Smith believes he's the champion distance walker in all

NORM GRABAR Oregon, and defies anyone to disprove it. He's open to challenge at any and all times, be it for a 50 or 150-mile jaunt. Should anyone care to take on this pedesting patriarch we'll gladly go along as referee. In our car of course. . . . Not much to really laugh at in these days of bringing up the rear of the Far West league with his Eugene Larks, but Walter (The Great) Mails continues to try. The other evening he obtained four milk-maids and as many cows (real ones, too), and produced a milking contest at home plate. One might suggest that Walter install an egg-laying contest as his next feature. But he's apt to counter that with the fact that his ball club is laying enough eggs the way it is. . . . . Speaking of the Larks, Owner Art Hadler is one of those lucky stiffs who at one time drove a big Cadillac when he was a Sacramento businessman. Now that he's in the baseball business he's piloting a Chevvy. Which is one way of telling that the Larks aren't doing so well financially.

But then scant few minor league clubs are these days. . . .

The crash at Vancouver's home plate between Tri-City's catching behemoth Nick Pesut and Clownish Bill Schuster of the Caps turned out to be indeed damaging to Schuster. He's still hobbling about on a painfully stiff knee and likely won't play any more baseball this season. He's now a one-legged rooster for sure. . .

Grabar Merely Victim of the Times in WIL

The demise of Norm Grabar as a Salem Senator is merely another example of just how truly rough it is for the younger baseball players to exist in our "Class B" circuit nowadays. Ordinarily, and before the WIL went beserk, the 23-year-old Grabar would have been worth keeping as a potential standout of the future. True enough, he needs to develop his batting. Which he could have worked at had the league been purely Class B.

But with so much experience now in the circuit (over 50 assorted ex-major and Coast leaguers), clubs cannot afford to go along with the younger fellows while they are developing. In order to keep up with their neighbors, the club operators must take on the more experienced (and costly) players also, therein knocking out the youngsters with limited ability.

It's a bad break for Grabar and others like him. And until the WIL magistrates do something about the bad mistake they are making in hiring the overly-costly older pros, the same break awaits other comparative youngsters in the league.

Really a bad break for the same magistrates also, for in not being able to fill their rosters with players of Grabar's caliber they're having to pay much more money in salaries and bonuses than they should. Were the truth to be known we'd bet our mortgaged Keizer plot that at least six of the eight clubs are right now so splashed with red ink they look like fire engines. And they're getting more crimson every week. . . .

Coaches Drop from North Bend Like Dead Flies

Seems to be quite a tangled mess at North Bend high all of nudden. In the space of a scant few months Athletic Director Fred Adams, Football Coach Ben Holcomb, Basketball Coach Dick Wilkin and Principal Bob Keuscher up and quit, cold and quick-like. Reason is said to be enclosed in the office bearing "superintendent" on th

The high school itself isn't the only hot spot. Every one of the coaches in the junior high has quit, as have 19 teachers and two other principals. Some mighty fine records as mentors, such as those owned by both Holcomb and Wilkins, went with them. Can't imagine what one man could do to cause such a disturb ance, but whatever it is it must be comparable to using arsenic. As for former villager Keuscher, he's now vice principal at Lincoln high in Portland and our North Bend correspondent reports that Bob's loss by that school "is terrific for he gave them the best high school they've had in 40 years-really a super job."

PHILADELPHIA, June 20-(A)-Mrs. Babe Didrikson Zaharias lost her temper and her grooved swing today while Patty Berg clicked off steady sub-par rols to eliminate the defending champton, I up, in their vital second round match in the women's western open tournament. The triumph for Miss Berg was her second in four days over the recognized No. 1 woman golfer of the nation and sent her into tomorrow's quarter-finals with three photographers. After driving into a trap and sending her second shot into the rough, Mrs. Zaharias missed a third by failing to hit the green. "Okay," she said to one photographer, "New I suppose you want another picture." Then she turned to the assembled camera group and complaineds "These cameramen must take their pictures, I suppose."

She picked up her ball with a flourish and said to Miss Bergi "You can have this one, Patty, I can't do anything with all this

At this point Mrs. Zaharlas was lying three and Miss Berg two, just off the edge of the green. Miss Berg now becomes the outstanding favorite for the championship.
