On Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Should one express a choice in cocktails when the host or hostess requests it?

A. It is always much better to state a preference rather than to leave the host in a quandry by saying, "Anything at all."

Q. Whose duty is it to see that the bride and bridegroom's car is ready and waiting for them at the wedding reception?

A. The best man should attend to this.

Q. What kind of clothes should a mother wear to the christening of her child?

Tips Given for Choosing Upholstered Pieces for Comfort and Utility Wear

By Sue Gardner

At this time of the year many homemakers are decorating their home for the first time, or adding new pieces to give additional comfort and charm to established homes. I have received many requests for a "guide" in choosing upholstered pieces, which to many people are "blind" items.

Naturally you cannot take apart an upholstered chair or sofa to study its construction, but there are some features that are evident with a little study on the part of the purchaser. The first feature is comfort. Now, you really will find this an individual matter, but every person in the family should have at least one chair, chosen for his own comfort. One couple I know have just bought two club chairs that look identical to the guests who come to their home, but are really constructed on different measuremoss and th cotton padding over a foot taller than the wife.

Upholstered furniture is a long time investment for most families. It should have sturdy hardwood frames, securely put together to withstand wear. The webbing used in the construction should also be secure, and springs of tempered steel should be firmly attached to this webbing. Filling should be sterilized hair or moss and the cottonpadding over this should be soft and smooth. In good quality furniture, you will find the muslin covers sturdy enough to hold the stuffing permanently.

The upholstered fabric design is a matter of personal taste, but the fabric should be resistant to wear, soil and fading.

Penicillin Aid To Rheumatic Fever Victims

NEW YORK—(AP)—Seven doctors have announced a way to keep "strep throat" infections from developing into rheumatic fever—one of the main sources of heart disease among teen-agers.

The doctors, five of whom are Air Force officers, said penicillin, if used at the sore throat stage, apparently goes a long way toward prevention of rheumatic fever. Reporting in a recent issue of the American Journal of Medicine, they said Air Force men who developed streptococcus throat infections at the Francis E. Warren Air Force Base, Wyoming, were divided into two groups. If your serial number ended in an even number, you got penicillin. If it ended in an odd number, you didn't.

All were cured of their streptococcus infections, the doctors reported, but the odd-numbers men developed rheumatic fever symptoms 14 times as often as the even-numbered ones.
