Grand Jury to Hear Problems of Rising Non-Support Cases

The problems of increased number of non-support cases, and the possibility of more court action because of a new Oregon law, will be brought before the Marion county grand jury today, District Attorney E. O. Stadter, jr., said Tuesday.

A considerable number of indictments on the charge are possible. Consideration is also slated of several criminal cases whose defendants have been bound over by district and justice courts.

The non-support cases will come before the new court of domestic relations. Addition of a third circuit court in Marion county this month will enable the court to devote more time to such problems and keep the cases under continuous surveillance, said the district attorney.

Pen Probe Suggested

Whether the jury will make any investigation of the state penitentiary was not known. One grand jury probe that institution, without making any report on it, early in 1950.

The law passed by the 1951 legislature provides that a father who fails to support his wife or children, if indicted, may be brought back from another state without requiring proof that he was in Oregon when the crime was committed. This changes, in essence, the uniform extradition act, which required that it be shown that the defendant was in the state at the time of the crime, a difficult matter because of the frequent "skipping" of the state to avoid prosecution, said Stadter.

No Return Needed

Another improvement in the law is that the defendant may go before a court in the state where arrested, put up bond and make support arrangements there, without having to return to Oregon. This enables a man to stay on his job and not lose the income needed for such support payments, as he would if required to make a lengthy trip.

The new law is reciprocal and is now effective in 39 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. All coast and northwest states are included. Stadter said federal legislation is being considered to facilitate further such prosecution, since the ease of travel has made the problem national in scope.

The principal idea of new legislation, said the district attorney, is to reduce the burden on relief rolls and relieve the suffering of children.

Stadter said he is investigating the situation of about 50 families on the welfare aid to dependent children program. Out of this check, a number of women have been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury. Several already have filed complaints.

Members of the jury, meeting for the first time, are Fannie E. Bowes, Maude E. Williams and Georgia C. Shane, all of Salem; Edward C. Smith of Aurora, John Plas of Scotts Mills, Muriel Bernhart of St. Paul and Robert Goetz of Woodburn.

Assistant professors of air science and tactics, Major Gilbert H. Charters and Captain John W. Thompson are scheduled to enroll in a special 10-day course in world political geography at the University of Portland, Aug. 20. They will instruct the newly developed geographical course to freshmen AF ROTC students in September.

Examination Time Nears For Examiners

Examination time for the men who examine Oregon residents for driver's licenses has been set for October 13, with applications being accepted now, according to the state civil service communication.

This will be the first entrance examination for such employees, to create a new employment register. All present examiners will be "blanketed-in" to civil service status, without testing.

Applicants must have graduated from high school and a year's experience affording public contact and driving, preferably supplemented by experience or training in automotive mechanics, or an equivalent combination of education and experience.

Information is available from the commission office in the state public service building.

I'd Like to Know...

You may have heard that a suit has been filed by the Anti-trust Division in Washington to break up Standard of California as well as six other West Coast oil companies. This action has prompted many inquiries about our methods and policies. We welcome these inquiries. We believe that the better you know us, the better you can understand how we fit into the American system. We answer all letters individually, but some points seem of general interest. We take this way of discussing them for everyone. If you have a question, write:

"What happens when Standard men go into the armed forces?"

One question on many people's minds these days is how military service may affect themselves or people they know... their jobs, their family security. People ask us, of course, about what happens to employees of Standard Oil Company of California. The answer shows what a big company can do. Standard Oilers come through this trying period in better financial shape than you might expect:

Let's take for example Bill, an average young Standard Oiler. As a mechanic with the Company, he makes $398 a month. Among other benefits he has company-paid life insurance worth $4,420 and a pension plan paid for partly by Standard, partly by himself.

Now, suppose Bill is called into the armed forces. One of the tough problems he might face is a lower income for his family. But, because Bill qualifies as to dependents and length of service with the Company, he'll be helped by a plan Standard has for him.

When Bill leaves for active duty, he's given an extra month's salary. Then, every month, Standard sends his family a check to make up the difference between his military pay and his Company pay. These checks can amount to as much as half his regular salary.

Moreover, Bill's Company life insurance and pension are carried right along. The insurance is still paid for entirely by Standard. The pension, which Bill paid for in part while he was working, will continue to grow... and now Standard of California pays it all.

When Bill comes back from military service, his job is waiting and all his benefits are intact. He finds that Standard, having big economic resources, can and does act to preserve the human resources of the nation... people like himself and his family.

This is Standard's "G. I. Policy" for qualified employees called into the armed forces. We believe it helps strengthen Company morale, and that of the nation, too—another example of the fact that Standard serves you best by being big and integrated.
