Habeas Corpus Writs Filed by 4 Pen Inmates

Writs of habeas corpus for four state penitentiary inmates were granted Wednesday by Circuit Judge George R. Duncan of Marion county. Hearings were set for 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, September 4.

Most prominent on the list is J. H. Audett, who was spokesman for the convicts in their decision to return to work this week after a week's strike.

Audette was sentenced to 7 1/2 years on a charge of larceny in Pendleton. He alleges that he was sentenced without indictment by the grand jury, without waiving indictment and without pleading guilty and that he was denied access to legal counsel for filing an appeal. He claims he waived indictment to a burglary charge but not to larceny.

The other writs, for petitions filed yesterday against Warden George Alexander, went to: Dan Morgan, sentenced April 15, 1944, from Sherman county for life imprisonment on a charge of second degree murder; alleges court which sentenced him was not meeting in official term, that he is innocent, that he was refused an attorney and denied a fair trial in not being taken before a magistrate until after more than 24 hours questioning.

Sam Huffman, sentenced Sept. 25, 1950, from Lincoln county to three years for larceny by bailer; alleges he is innocent, that he was not told the nature of the charge and was refused counsel.

Claude Revington Smallman, sentenced Nov. 4, 1947, from Coos county to 20 years for assault with intent to kill his wife; alleges that no crime was committed, that he was beaten and tortured for eight or nine days, that he was refused counsel.

Driver Given Fine, Jail Term

Clarence Raymond Armstrong was fined $200 and sentenced to 60 days in jail on conviction of driving on suspended operator's license Wednesday in justice court held by Judge Alf O. Nelson.

In other court action, James Strom was convicted of reckless driving, fined $50 with 30 days jail sentence suspended.

David Shafer was convicted of failure to maintain proper fire equipment at logging operations, fined $25.

OLCC Board Voices Praise Of Hammond

High commendation for State Liquor Administrator William H. Hammond was voiced in Portland at the meeting of the state liquor commission this week at which Hammond asked acceptance of his resignation at the commission's "earliest convenience."

Commissioner William Spangler of Eagle Point said, "I am sure I speak for the others (Chairman Robert L. Elstrom and Commissioner William Bingham) in declaring Hammond to be an outstanding executive who has rendered fine service to the state of Oregon. * * * The state is suffering a considerable loss."

With Salem firm Hammond is to come to Salem to be associated with the Union Security company.

At the request of Chairman Elstrom, he will remain in Portland "a month or two," pending selection of his successor.

Hammond, whose administration was criticized by a Multnomah county grand jury last April, advised the commission and Gov. Douglas McKay several months ago of his intention to resign not later than next January 1.

He said at the recent Portland commission meeting that his new request to be relieved sooner was prompted by the fact that "plans for the reconstitution of the liquor commission have been completed." His previous resignation was not made public for some time, it was declared, because the governor and commission would have been "subject to undue pressure relative to a successor."

No successor to Hammond has been chosen.

Salem has been Hammond's "home" even during his residence in Portland since 1947, he disclosed. He retains membership in the Salem Elks' lodge, of which he is a past exalted ruler, and also is a member of Salem Legion post 136 and Marion county 40 et 8 vulture. Salem also has been his legal home for voting, the Hammonds having a summer home on the Little North Fork of the Santiam river.

Hammond, who was assistant advertising manager of the Oregon City Enterprise prior to 1930, was brought to Salem in state employ by the late Secretary of State Hal Hoss, himself associated in the ownership of the Oregon City newspaper, after Hammond was graduated from the University of Oregon.

It was Hammond who drafted the state's initial legislation on driving examinations and he was manager of the drivers' license division of the state motor vehicle department and also headed the secretary of state's traffic safety program, prior to being called into service with the 41st division in 1940.

During the war years, Hammond headed the western defense command's G2 (intelligence), was assistant G2 officer in the 4th army, and was discharged as a colonel. He returned to his state position for a year, prior to accepting the liquor commission appointment.

Board Opposes State Employees Pay Increase

The state civil service commission has no state employe general salary raise now in mind, it was declared Wednesday by James M. Clinton, director of the commission.

His announcement came a day after the state board of control voiced opposition to a civil service salary and classification adjustment request, on the ground that the change might lead to demands for another general salary increase.

Board members said the accountant classifications in question actually touched only three persons under their jurisdiction, as employes in state institutions. Overall, however, 203 positions were affected, according to the civil service head.
