Modern Fireplace Accessories Are In Black Finished Steel and Iron

By Sue Gardner

A simple, functional collection of modern fireplace accessories comes from the drawing board of designer George Nelson. The entire collection is in black finished steel and iron and the tools have shaped handles of polished birch.

Nelson showed his new creations against a simple white wall with only one touch of color—an orange canvas log carrier set in a metal semi-circular log holder. The canvas will be available in other colors, too. The designer's new fire basket, "resembling a backbone with curving ribs," enabling the logs to roll together while burning will produce fine fires.

There are several types of andirons, including a pair in X-shapes, a pair that resembles sled runners, panel types and one pair that looks like a line drawing of a human form, minus the arms. The shovel, brush and poker for the fireplace, have a fresh touch in the birch handles. They come in sets, either with a wall bracket on which to hang them, or on a tripod stand.

A combination andiron and coal grate, the latter removable, is handy for charcoal broiling indoors. While the collection is designed for modern homes, the pieces are so well styled and so simple in silhouette, they can fit into many types of living rooms where the hearth is the center of attraction in the winter months. The pieces are in a moderate price bracket. (Copyright 1934 General Features Corp.)

On Sunday the Parratts danced at the Oregon Folk Dance Federation Festival in Portland at the Washington Park Amphitheatre. The couple will also present exhibitions at the Penny Hoedowners at Canby and at a 4-H group in Eugene tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernet entertained at dinner for the visitors at their home Monday night. The couple danced for the guests and showed colored slides of their Mexican trip.

On Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. When a married woman is writing a note of thanks for a gift presented to her and her husband, should she sign both her husband's name and her own?

A. No. She should sign her name only, but she should mention her husband's name somewhere in the note, as "Harry and I wish to express our deep appreciation, etc."

Q. What is the proper way to extend invitations to a bridal shower?

A. These may be telephoned, written on a visiting card, or sent on the printed shower cards available at all greeting-card counters.

Q. What is the correct thing to say when someone apologizes over the telephone for getting the wrong number?

A. "Certainly," or, "That is quite all right."
