Knotty Pine to be Used in New Pieces Of Furniture for Homes, Informal Use

By Sue Gardner
You are going to see a great deal of fine pine pieces in American homes in the next few years. Several companies have gone into the production of case goods, tables and chairs of pine, rubbed to a soft finish, for homes where an informal note is wanted in a good, substantial furniture.

One of the most interesting collections is a group of knotty pine furniture adapted from original English and American pieces. This is a softer, calmer collection than the ranch style furniture of previous seasons, but it has many convenient features, such as small drawers and rollers on chests for mobility in a living room. There is a charming cobbler's bench with an upholstered seat that is recommended for use as an extra television seat—something the old time cobblers never thought about in their day.

A tea room doubles for a side table and has extension leaves on top that make it a small dining table. It also has a removable tray for the bottom shelf and this helps in informal serving. An old time gossip chair for telephone use has a pretty seat of upholstered neoprene. There is a large round coffee table with a lazy Susan in the center. A choice of legs to be mixed or matched in a living room group include slim tapered legs, spool styles and a grooved leg. The whole collection is done with an airy light feeling that gives a quiet charm to a room.

Dr. Schauffler Speaks at Luncheon

"Temper the credence of what you hear from China" is the advice of Dr. Goodrich C. Schauffler, guest speaker at Saturday's AA UW luncheon, meeting in the Senator hotel. Dr. Schauffler, prominent Portland obstetrician (who had to hurry back to Portland from the meeting to tend a case), taught obstetrics and modern surgery techniques in the hospitals and medical schools of the Chengtu area of China near Tibet from 1946-48 under UNRRA and WHO (World Health Organization). He made friends at that time with many people who have kept him informed of present conditions. Though many intellectuals and the better-trained personnel of the hospitals and schools have been shorn of their jobs and everything they own by the present Red regime they are personally unscathed except spiritually, and the mass killings are much exaggerated.

Dr. Schauffler says he is still receiving additions to his jade collection, largely as gifts from former patients, through Hong Kong. He also explained that young men are still coming to this and other foreign countries to study. However, Chinese hospital conditions, never good, and which he and his staff worked to improve, have again deteriorated, and there is not and never has been care for those who cannot pay well for it. And yet the masses, the little people, produce the beauty in art and handwork that is as much a part of China as their poverty.

AAUW Introduced
AAUW president, Miss Mildred Christenson, presided at the first luncheon meeting and introduced members of the board. The first fall fellowship dinners, under the supervision of Mrs. D. A. Emerson, will be held at 6:30 p.m. October 11 at the homes of members. Permanent name tags for members were distributed for the first time.

Mrs. William Foster announced the following list of classes: Social studies, international relations, music appreciation, interior decoration, child study, French and Spanish conversation, travel and literature, others to be added if interested women are interested. Time and place of individual class meetings will be announced by the chairman.

Table decorations at the September 22 meeting were by Miss Helen Lane, Mrs. Ray Smith, and Miss Margaret McDewitt. Mrs. Nora E. Thompson, Mrs. Floyd L. Utter and Miss Betty Jane Bolton acted as hostesses.

The next board meeting will be October 3 at the home of Mrs. Arthur Sprague, with Mrs. Bertram as co-hostess.

Designing Woman

CENTERPIECE ON WALL

If there's no room on the table for a centerpiece, put it on the wall. A shadow box above the postage stamp-size dining table ups floral arrangements to a more eye-catching show-off spot while it leaves space for uncrowded place settings, and at the same time, it's big decoration for the room. Build the shadow box or have it built tall and wide enough to be important on the wall where it's to hang, and deep enough to hold the containers that make arranging easy to you. Flowers, leaves, interesting branches, reeds and grasses, small potted plants, fruits, colorful vegetables, driftwood and decorative objects of all kinds—all of these are material for picture-like compositions which are more handsome for their deep shadow box frame. The shadow box can be an open frame through which wall color shows, or may have a back in another room scheme color. Other good spots for shadow boxes—over the fireplace, in the hall, over the television set. The shadow box picture which can easily be changed is a good trial ground for decorative ideas, color scheme combinations, experiment in working out good proportions.
