New Warden Outlines Plan For Prisoners

Under the title "Plans for Oregon State Penitentiary," Warden Virgil O'Malley outlined his program for individual treatment of inmates to the members of AAUW at the branch luncheon October 20 at the Senator hotel. Following a brief history of crime and punishment through the ages, he explained why modern penal methods and crime preventive programs are in line with the basic concepts of our society, democracy and Christianity.

Mr. O'Malley then described the four steps each prisoner of the Oregon institution will be required to undergo before appearing before the classification committee, composed of a sociologist, doctor, and several key staff members. These steps are a thorough personal history, followed up by questionnaires to people in the prisoner's background, extensive intelligence and achievement tests, and a complete physical examination. The classification committee, which met October 18 for the first time, determines from the inmate's case history the degree of custody required and the type of correctional activity (including education, trade instruction, work habits or psychiatric treatment). The prisoner agrees with his program before it is undertaken.

A recreational director, due to be added soon to the prison staff, will set up a system of recreation, as part of the treatment program, and a canteen system will provide an inmate welfare fund out of which prisoners will pay for their own improved facilities.

Appeals for Aid

Mr. O'Malley made an appeal to the university women to aid in projects for the 32 women prisoners, who have no organized recreational program. He hopes, however, to incorporate them in his classification system.

Air Defense Filter Center: Telephone lines link these vital posts with the nation's far-flung air defense radar network.

UNITING THE DEFENSE OF THE UNITED STATES

How we've geared the telephone system to meet today's emergency

1. How fast can we spread the word? Since the days of Paul Revere, the nation's strength in times of crisis has depended on swift, reliable communications. Today, the telephone is at work helping our military men organize their forces... at work saving minutes and hours and days in defense production plants... at work nearly everywhere uniting the strength of our millions of people.
2. Emergency facilities of our own are being added, too. Like this standby generator which can produce our own electricity in case of power line failure. Special plans have been made to rush "telephone task forces" of men and materials into strategic areas, if need be. In every way possible, we're making sure the calls keep going through... the calls which mean so much to our nation.

3. Since Pearl Harbor, we've put well over a billion dollars into telephone facilities in the Pacific West. We've made many, many technical improvements to speed and extend the service. The result: A telephone system far stronger than ever, doubled in size. We could do it because, over the years, we've had the financial strength to attract the investors' savings we must have to pay expansion costs. And with financial strength in the future, we can continue to build our ability to serve you and our nation.
