Looking Her Age Trips Up Runaway Girl

Levi told a good story but she just didn't look much older than her 12 years. That's why she sat in the protective division of the city jail today, a runaway from her home at Redwood City, Calif.
It all started Monday when she left home and went to San Francisco. Then she came here and Tuesday night called on travelers' aid for help. She said she was orphaned, was 23 years old, and had planned to get work in a store. But the stores all said they needed no help until just before Christmas. So, she said, she was in a bit of a jam for money.

Mrs. Elizabeth Moorad, head of the women's protective division, finally got the story but it took two days. About the same time the travelers aid linked her with the report that Mary Levi, 12, had disappeared from her home at Redwood City, Calif., taking $150 from a dresser drawer.

So Mary admitted her identity and her mother, Mrs. James Levi, took the Cascade north to get her late tonight.

The money? All gone. Spent it on clothes and train fare. Why did she run away? She just wasn't allowed to go "hardly
