Here's another in a series of stories about recipes found in our mother's recipe file. Here, for instance, is one we've had in the family for ages, and which won a huge prize in a national contest last winter as something "new." It's called cake, but really more of a pudding.

Buying for Your Home You Can Dye at Home in Your Own Washer, Follow Instructions Carefully

By Sue Gardner
Homemakers are finding out that a dyeing job will revive numerous articles in the house. The process is simplified with the use of a washing machine and careful following of instructions. An expert a mother showed me a beautiful collection of hand-made afghans she had inherited in a dingy condition and had dyed a beautiful fresh yellow for her baby. She also had recolored curtains, drapes and clothing after mastering the machine dyeing process.

Here are some tips from experts on using your washing machine for a home dyeing job. Unless you are experienced at judging fabric contents, use an all-fabric dye which will act as well on natural as on synthetic fibers. Many of the fabrics today are combinations of fibers. Watch your fabrics first and use the washer only for items up to four and a half pounds for the best results. You will find the dyes quite inexpensive, but be sure you have enough before you begin the job. Two standard size packages of dye will color 12 ounces of light cotton, linen, silk and viscose rayon and you need four to do a dark coloring job. Extra dye is needed for nylon and acetate rayon. Black requires as much as six packages.

Wash and rinse the article thoroughly before dyeing. Use a color remover if you are changing to a lighter shade or a different hue. It is better to have a separate tub or pan for the color removing process. If the article is streaked, stained or spotted, take the color out first. Check your instructions and you will probably find the hottest water the best — and you may even preheat your machine by running it a while, then draining the water. Dissolve the dye in a quart jar or pitcher in hot water — a wooden spoon is good for stirring.

You should extend the washing cycle for dyeing and be sure there is enough water to cover the fabric before you begin. If you have a spin dry type washer use it, otherwise squeeze out the water manually — you can use rubber gloves to save your hands from staining. Dye experts caution against dyeing woollens in the machine because they might mat, but I have seen some good jobs done by housewives on knitted woollens. Here, again, you want to follow instructions for handling wool dyeing on your package. It is considered all right to use the washing machine for a whitening process on yellowed fabrics of all kinds.
