Mark Hatfield Points to Soviet Weak Points

(Photo on page 1)
 Even though the United States hasn't achieved the full measure of its democratic ideals, as long as it continues to strive toward achievement it has the right to criticize such systems as that of Soviet Russia, Mark Hatfield of Willamette university told Salem Kiwanis club Tuesday.

The dean of students spoke at a luncheon meeting where Carl Greider, YMCA program secretary, was chosen club president.

Hatfield said all political systems have their myths, points of partial failure such as in political equality. However, he said, in the United States "we feel uneasy about them" while Russia denies that such myths exist in its system.

He pointed out as contradictions in the Soviet system the doctrine of "temporary" dictatorship, the promise that the people would rule (Soviet congress met 104 days in the government's first 20 years), abolition of the class system (replaced by a more rigid hierarchy on an occupational basis), sharing of each according to his need (changed to each according to his work), freedom of the press and of religion and the idea of economic democracy (impossible when politicians control the economy without checks and balances).

Hatfield declared that the capitalist system bulwarks democracy because under it power cannot be centralized.

Other new officers of the club, to be installed late in December, are James Hunt, first vice president; James Payne, second vice president; Dr. Robert F. Anderson, third vice president; Linn Smith, treasurer; Robert DeArmond, Kenneth Perry and Clyde Warren, directors. Holdover directors are Albert C. Cragg, Floyd Shepard and Dr. Will Thompson.

Wide Variety of Diseases Listed
 A wide variety of communicable diseases reported last week to Marion county health department was topped by four cases of broncho pneumonia, it was announced Tuesday.

Others included three new cases of chickenpox and scabies, two each of measles and ringworm, one each of impetigo, German measles, rheumatic fever and scarlet fever.

Oregon Shrimp In Commercial Quantities Now

PORTLAND, Nov. 20 (AP)—A biologist told the state fish commission that there are enough shrimp in Oregon coastal waters to provide an important commercial fishery.

George Harry, the biologist in charge of marine research, reported that a recent exploratory expedition off Depoe Bay had caught as much as 10 pounds of shrimp in a single drag.

The pink shrimp, similar to those caught off Alaska, were found in green mud on the ocean bottom, Arnie J. Suonela, Oregon fisheries director, said in making Harry's report public.

"We believe from data gleaned off Depoe Bay and in explorations made in October off the mouth of the Columbia river that we have uncovered a valuable new fishing resource," he said.

The commission will continue its research next spring.

Ministerial Group Opposes Visits in Salem

Protest against appointment of a U. S. ambassador to the Vatican was voiced Tuesday morning by Salem Ministerial association, as an expression of opposition to "preferential treatment of one church."

The recommendation of a social action committee headed by Dr. Seth R. Huntington was adopted unanimously, with a statement to be sent to President Truman, Sen. Tom Connally of the foreign affairs committee and Oregon's delegation in congress.

Dr. Huntington stressed that "our argument is not with Catholic people or with all that is good in Catholicism but with the Roman Catholic hierarchy."

The association's statement made these contentions:

"That the appointment is contrary to the time-honored interpretation to the first amendment to the Constitution, which is the principle of separation of church and state; "seating of an American ambassador at the Vatican would only lead to preferential treatment of one church"; "official process of our government would tend to become interlocked with the official processes of the Roman Catholic church"; such a post would be superfluous in view of the U. S. ambassador to Italy; the Vatican "is not to be thought of as a political state, except very remotely, but is instead the seat of the Roman Catholic church"; the appointment would be not only unconstitutional but "ill-conceived."

The group also directed its Christian education committee to implement a proposed program for inter-church leadership training. As presented by Dr. Arthur H. Maynard, the school would offer a half dozen courses in teaching methods, Bible, social problems and administration. It was tentatively scheduled for Tuesday night from next January 29 to March 4.
