The crowd for the Willamette-Oregon State clash here last Saturday night was one of if not the largest in history for a Bearcat game in the WU gym, school officials report. And nary McMullin, Eddie Cicotte and a soul who saw the scrap will disagree with the testimony that the Beavers' Freshman Bill Toole of Klamath Falls is one of the fastest lads they've seen in a hoop suit. Looks like S. Gill has himself quite a prospect in the husky kid who less than a year ago was an all-state prepper and the state's sprinting champion. . . . Then on the other hand there isn't much to be gloomy about when one considers the Bearcats' immediate cage future. That is, unless the hip injury suffered by Ted Loder doesn't respond to treatment. Johnny Lewis looks as if he again has the goods at WU and could quite conceivably make It four straight Northwest conference championships. Had the Cats not been so miserable with their shooting (.250 average from the field and not much better at the foul stripe) they would have licked the Beavers . . .

Richter Rated Best Linebacker in PCC

What with such linebackers as Cal's Les Richter, UCLA's Donn Moomaw, Southern Cal's Pat Cannamela and Washington's Jim Wiley around, not to mention Oregon State's Cub Houck and Bob Redkey who aren't duds by any means, the Pacific Coast conference had more than its share of the nation's better holepluggers last season. There are those who index Richter as best of all. And there are others who wouldn't swap Cannamela or Moomaw for two Richters.

Best way to finger out the best one would be to ask some of the ball-carrying backfielders they've played against. One in particular would be Hugh McElhenny, Washington's great fullback. He picks Richter hands down, with this testimony: "Every time I've played against him, he's been with me, over me, under me and all around me.'

Another tipoff as to which one is tops at backing up a line can be gleaned from this week's All-Coast selections by both the conference coaches and the Associated Press. Both factions selected Richter first and foremost. . . .

They're All Pulling for Hugh McElhenny

The AP's All-America comes out Friday (this is one of the nationally recognized biggies in the annual selections) and in speaking of McElhenny, all Washingtondom is holding its breath until the final returns are in. They feel that "Hurrican Hugh" is much deserving of a berth in the first team backfield, (so do we), and in the light of his individual performances throughout the season with a team that couldn't win, they have a good point. Seattle PI's Royal Brougham voted for McElhenny and feels that he has a chance. Brougham also feels that such others as Princeton's Kazmaier, Tennessee's Lauricella, Illinois' Karras, Baylor's Isbell and Kentucky's Parilli have good chances too.

Jackson always maintained his innocence of any wrong-doing in connection with the scandals that rocked the baseball world following the memorable series. He had kept in contact with textile and sandlot baseball for many years prior to his death and was a popular and respected figure in this area.

Hundreds of fans in the Piedmont section of South Carolina believed that Jackson was innocent of all charges against him. Repeated attempts were made by Jackson and his friends to prove

By Jack Hand COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 5-(R)-The world champion New York Yankees today reduced their radio operations in reply to George Trautman's grim warning that the minor leagues can not long survive the "radio umbrella" of big lead broadcasts.

Trautman, president of the National Association of Minor Leagues, called for "reasonable restraints" on big league broadcasts in his annual report to the minors' Golden Jubilee convention.

Earlier, Commissioner Ford Frick pledged cooperation of his office, using as a yardstick-"Is it good for baseball?" It was Frick's first appearance before the minors since he was elected to succeed A. B. (Happy) Chandler. Yanks Go to Work

Yankee action followed swiftly. The Yanks will not license any national network broadcasts-such as "Game of the Day" - from Yankee stadium. They will curtail their "Home of Champions" network that covered 18 cities in 1951, and will limit these broadcasts to day games. There will be no out-of-town televisions of Yank home games. They will continue to broadcast all games, home and away and televise all home games over a New York station.

Trautman put the burden squarely on the big leaguers when he said "It is the legal fight and Real hot stove league surprise was Walter (The Great) Mails' jump from Eugene to Pocatello, Ida. It was figured that Mails would be back as No. 1 drumbeater for the Larks next summer, and that he might be a possibility as replacement for the resigned Mike Radan in the town Senators organization. But he's taken a job as general manager of the Pioneer league club and the area therein loses one of its most colorful as well as loquacious baseball figures. . . .
