Richardson Firm Ordered To Accept Loss

The state supreme court held Wednesday that the Richardson Motor Company of Portland must accept a $2,262 loss because it cashed a forged bank draft from an automobile buyer.

The decision reversed the Multnomah county circuit court. The company sued Bouthillier Motor Company, also of Portland, to obtain reimbursement for the money it lost as a result of the forgery.

Records in the case show that in 1947, a man with a $2,262 forged draft on a New York bank, bought a car from the Richardson Motor Company, and received the car and $252 in change. The next day the man sold the car to Bouthillier Motor Company for $2200. When the fraud was discovered

Richardson sued Bouthillier, and the former won in the circuit court of Judge Martin W. Hawkins. Justice Harold J. Warner held Richardson to blame for cashing the draft without identification.
