

Traditional Christmas Dinner Prepared for Front Lines

By Jane Eads
WASHINGTON — (AP) — Right up to the front line in Korea, American GIs will have a traditional Christmas dinner, served hot, with a pound of turkey per man and all the trimmings. Generally, the menu will be the same as the troops had on Thanksgiving day and will vary only slightly in different areas. Army cooks will prepare the dinner from a master menu set up here by the Quartermaster Corps last August.

Here's what they'll be eating in "ZI"—that is, Zone of the Interior, or the United States proper: Breakfast—Chilled fresh frozen orange juice, ready-to-eat cereal, fresh milk, scrambled eggs, jam, toast and butter, coffee. Dinner (mid-day) — Celery hearts, stuffed olives, sweet pickles, spiced tomato juice cocktail, roast turkey, giblet gravy, celery dressing, cranberry sauce, whipped potatoes, glazed sweet potatoes, buttered green beans, lettuce wedges with Thousand Island dressing, Parker House rolls with jam and butter, hot mince meat pie, fruit cake, coffee, ice cream, tangerines, grapes, mixed salted nuts, assorted candies. Supper — Turkey rice soup, crackers, assorted cold cuts, assorted cheese, hot potato salad, chopped onion and green pepper salad, rye bread, butter, chilled pears, coffee.

In the Eastern Command, including Japan and Korea, the menu will be much the same, except that grilled bacon and hot biscuits will be served for breakfast; a shrimp cocktail, fresh frozen buttered corn and lima beans will be added to the dinner, and there will be no soup for supper. Turkey stuffing will be spicier and there will be fruit punch. Menus in the European Command will be about the same as those in ZI and the Eastern Command with the exception of different vegetables.

Here's the recipe for that poultry stuffing they will use in the Eastern Command, the portions calculated on the basis of 100 men: 5 pounds celery, 10 pounds white bread, 5 pounds onions, 3 ounces of poultry seasoning, 6 No. 1 cans evaporated milk, 25 ounces of dehydrated eggs and 2 pounds lard. With the exception of desserts, the boys are getting pretty much what they favor most in the way of food as determined by extensive tests being conducted throughout the service. Turkey and pot roast with brown gravy are popular in the meat line. Fresh milk is top drink. Green beans, canned, frozen or fresh, are the favorite vegetable, and banana cream and lemon meringue pie are the favorite desserts.
