Study of Meat Pies Reveals Several Old, Some New Recipes Using Beef

By MAXINE BUREN
Statesman Women's Editor

Having read two of Dickens' books quite recently we find ourselves meat pie minded as someone in the books is forever dining on meat pie.

Though not particularly avid eater of meat pies, we thought it might be a good idea to bone up a bit on the subject as a service to our readers.

SEE LONG LIST

Looking first to Fanny Merritt Farmer, she overhauled us with a list that includes: Pies: beefsteak, chicken, English steak and kidney, ham and egg, quince, shepherd's, veal, Scotch, mince-meat, got itself out of the main dish class and into the deserts, but there's usually a sport in every family.

Well, we say, why go to Boston for an English pie, so instead we thumb through Miss Acton's Modern Cookery for Private Families, new edition published in London 1882 and we find

BEEFSTEAK PIE

From a couple to three pounds of rump steak will be sufficient for a good sized family pie. It should be well kept, though perfectly sweet, for in no form can tabbed meat be more offensive than when it is enclosed in paste. Trim off coarse skin and part of the fat. If the meat should not be tender, it may be gently beaten with a paste roller until the fiber is broken and then divided into slices half as large as the hand, and laid in a dish bordered with paste. It should be seasoned with salt, pepper or cayenne and sufficient water poured in to make the gravy and keep the meat moist. Lay on the cover and be careful always to keep the edge in every part with egg or cold water, then join securely to the paste which is round the rim, trim both off close to the dish, pass the point of the knife through the middle of the cover, lay some slight roll or ornament of paste around it and decorate border of the pie in any of the usual modes which are too common to require description. Send the pie to a well-heated but not fierce oven for about an hour and twenty minutes.

COMMON MEAT PIE

A pound and a quarter if flour will make sufficient paste for a moderate sized pie, and two pounds of mutton freed from the greater portion of the fat will fill it. Butter a dish, line it with about half the paste rolled thin, lay mutton on it evenly and sprinkle over it an ounce of salt, and from one half to a whole spoonful of pepper (atchool) according to taste, pour in cold water to within an inch of the brim, roll the cover which should be quite half an inch thick, to the size of the dish. Wet edges of paste with cold water or white of an egg, be careful to close them securely, cut them off close to the rim of the dish, stick the point of the knife through the center and bake the pie an hour and a quarter in a well heated oven.

On Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. What toast can a father propose at an engagement-announcement party for his daughter and future son-in-law?

A. "I want you to drink to the happiness of a young pair whose future welfare is close to the hearts of all of us—Mary (holding up his glass and looking at her) and Bob (hold it up again and looking at him)."

Q. When dining in a friend's home, is one obligated to take a helping of everything offered?

A. It is courteous to do so, even if one is not fond of some certain dish. And for a guest to refuse two or three dishes is really rude and unparadonable.

Q. When should the knife be used for cutting at the dinner table?

A. The knife should be used only when it is impossible to cut the food easily with the fork.
