SPORTSLIGHTNER

by Al Lightner

Sunday sorties:

Top prospect for the new managerial post at Lewiston is said to be Bill Brenner, longtime bossman of the Vancouvers who last season rode herd at Yakima . . . Phone call from J. Luther (Like) Sewell to Floyd Clifford (Bill) Bevens the other day just about broke our Willie's heart. The Cincinnati manager informed his new pitching hope that he (Sewell) was counting on Bev as the No. 1 bullpen fireman for the Redlegs. Bevens tried to tell Sewell that he didn't want to be a reliefer, but was told instead that such was to be his fate. "Guess I'll have to show 'em in spring training that maybe I should be a regular starter," opined Bailey Road Bill . . . Well up into the thick of things among the state prep basketballers after a so-so start, Salem's Vikings blame their success to three items: (1) The whole outfit is driving harder, (2) Bob Hazel is back in top shape and is harvesting the points and (3) 6-5 Center Jack Bishop is showing fine improvement. Mentor Harold Hauk always did like to mold his outfits around a big and capable center. Bishop is fast proving to be the bill-filler . . . Another prep scoring standout in the state to fit alongside the Halbrooks and Fredericks is Milwaukie High's Jerry Zimmerman. He hit for 37 points against Gresham the other night and is averaging well over 20 per game. He's an all-around athlete at Milwaukie, where Jerry Lillie now coaches the footballers. Zimmerman pitches for the baseball team and halfbacks for the footballers . . . Washington Husky Guard Mike McCutchen is an athletic rarity in that he teaches Sunday School in a Seattle church. You don't often see this combination . . . The "Gale" playing basketball for the City League Campbell Insulators is the one and same Laddy Gale of Oregon "Tall Fir" fame. He'll coach the City All-Stars in their romp with the Harlem Globetrotters next Friday night at the Vik Villa. Incidentally, same Trotters drew an all-time Tacoma basketball record 3600 the other night. They should've been around last summer, in Tacoma Tiger baseball suits . . .

JACK HURLEY

Hurley Impresses as Shrewd Manager for 'Kid'

While in Seattle recently we had the pleasure of meeting Jack Hurley, the angular and astute manager of Harry (Kid) Matthews, who is now the talk of the boxing world for his defiant stand against the IBC of New York, the octopus-like faction that is being accused of controling, or trying to control, all boxing.

A deliberate and cautious fellow who might be mistaken for a peace-loving clergyman relaxing in a hotel lobby, Hurley doesn't appear to be party-of-the-first-part in the cold war existing between himself and Al Weill, IBC promoter.

When reminded that he went to greet lengths with his efforts to land a championship bout for his Matthews with Joey Maxim, and then suddenly nixed it flatly when Weill offered the terms, the veteran boxing man had an interesting tale to tell.

"Let me tell you about my fighter Billy Petrolle, the greatest of his day," tendered Hurley. "He never held a title. I proved to him that he was better off without it. A champion's manager seldom is his own boss. He has to tie up with one promoter and somebody else is boss. Well, Petrolle today is wealthy, is a director in a bank, and has all his marbles.

"Maybe Billy would like to see his name in the record book as a fellow who had been champion of the world. But his bank books don't make bad reading, either."

Consequently we were left with the impression that Hurley doesn't care whether Matthews becomes champion or not—so long as he continues to be the most talked-of fighter in the game. It's a shrewd and cagey way of playing fistic cards, but a profitable one indeed. Hurley is trying to get as much money as he can for Matthews, without permitting the IBC monopoly to ensnare Matthews with its long-reaching tentacles.

His Terms Will Govern Any Title Battle

This doesn't necessarily mean that Hurley intends sidestepping all chances for a championship bout. He may accept one even this year. But we'll bet that if he does, it will be under the supervision of his own terms. And if he doesn't, Matthews will still be the darling of the boxing nation, worth his weight in gold at any box office, simply because he's the boy who is being denied by the disliked IBC.

What does Matthew. himself think of all this? Naturally any fighter dreams of becoming a champion. We had a talk with The Kid in the same Seattle hotel lobby and he looked to be anything but broken hearted over the fact that his manager tabooed the bout with Maxim. Matthews has great faith in Boss Hurley, and with a friendly smile let us know, "Jack knows what he is doing."

Matchmaker Tex Salkeld was in Seattle buzzing with Hurley at the same time, trying to land a Matthews-Danny Nardico bout for Portland. We've since seen where Hurley doesn't think much of such a scrap.

One would think that the prizefighting pride of Seattle would have naught but pestering admirers wherever he went in his home town. Yet all during his visit to the busy Olympic Hotel lobby with his young daughter, not once did anyone stop to glare or seek an autograph from the curly-thached gladiator . . .

'We Geeve to Heem, Eh Keed?'

Which could be exactly what Soldat (Big Russian) Gorky is whispering to Brother Ivan as the two mat villians prepare for their tag team gigantic with Herb and Bill Parks at the Salem Armory Tuesday night. Matchmaker Elton Owen opines this will be the most thunderous tag teamer he's ever produced here. The bearded Gorkys have no love for the Parks boys, and the feeling is quite mutual.

Should Be Terrific Tuesday . . .

Gorky-Parks Family Feud To Flare on Armory Mat

The wrestling version of the Martins and Coys—so far as the Northwest area is concerned at any rate—blares forth at the armory Tuesday night when the Gorky Brothers, Soldat and Ivan, do battle with the Parks Boys, Herb and Bill, in one of the most promising tga ETAO SHMRD SHRDL CMFWY MFWYP CMFW MW MF MFF tag team mat battles Matchmaker Elton Owen ever concocted.

This is the one Owen has been trying to land for over a year, and for obvious reasons. The Parks Brothers have taken a great delight in making mat life rather miserable for Soldat in recent months, and numerous have been the occasions for heated flareups between the Big Russian and the elder Parks, Perpetual Motion Herb. It got so bad three weeks ago that Soldat refused to show on any card on which the Parks family was represented, and sent for Brother Ivan in New York.

Owen had been trying to lure Ivan from the East for some time. The two Gorkys appeared here in tag team matches a year ago, and were about as rugged as they came. Since then, however, the Parkses have taken over as the most formidable duet in this area.

"Bar none," attests the productive Owen, "this oughta be the best tag team match ever seen in Salem. It certainly has all the earmarks."

This will be the first time the brother teams ever have met one another. And since so much of the Gorky vs. Parks storm has thundered here in the past, Owen wanted to give Salem fans the first meeting between the brothers.

A strong preliminary card has been set by Owen also. In the 8:30 p.m. opener Newcomer Marcel Ouimet, a Frenchman, will clash with Gene Blakely, Texas tough guy. The 2-of-3 fall special has Buck Weaver on with Prince O'Mar.

Owen urges fans to get their seat reservations made at the armory early, as the Tuesday card looms as a sure sellout.

Church Basket Chases Close

The battling is still close in all three Church Basketball Leagues as the campaign sings toward the midway mark. In the 'A'" circuit First Christian leads with a 6-0 mark but is only half a game up on Calvary Baptist, which owns a 5-0 record.

Two clubs, First Methodist and St. Mark's share the top spot in the "B" loop with five wins and no setbacks in the "C" wheel. Jason Lee leads with 5-0 but Chemawa is a close second with 4-0.

Meyers of First Presbyterian leads the individual scoring race in the "A" league with 104 in six games for a better-than-17 average. His total includes one 38-point performance for a new league record. Second high man in the "A" ranks is D. Coe of 1st Baptist with 100.

Central Lutheran's Brokke tops the "B" loop with 47 markers, followed by Heston of St. Marks with 44. In the "B" league Jason Lee's Doughton has 65 points for honors and second is Poe of Chemawa with 55.

Trotters Face All-Stars Friday

The Harlem Globetrotters, known the world over for their trickery on a basketball floor and one of the top atractions anywhere they go during any hoop campaign, make their annual visit to Salem next Friday night.

The Trotters are to make with their mirthful mastery in the Salem High Gym in an eight o'clock game with a group of Salem City League All-Stars, the latter coached by Laddie Gale. The colored visitors will of course weave their halftime act into the program.

Such veteran performers as Duke Cumberland, Tom Sealy, Carl Helem, Babe Pressley and Bob Hall, among others, and most of them twice the age of the All-Stars they"ll face, dot the Trotter line up.

Gale will have on his roster an assortment of former Salem High, Willamette University and Oregon College of Education players, including Al Bellinger, Don Hoy, Cub Houck, Leroy Coleman, Bill Shattuc, Dan Montag, Lefty Sheilds and Jack Fitzmaurice.

Tickets for the exhibition are now available at the Wicklund, Anderson and Barbs sporting goods firms. The game is under the sponsorship of the Salem Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Stock Market Hustles Ahead

NEW YORK (AP) – An abrupt about face in the stock market this week jerked it out of a reaction and sent it scurrying ahead to challenge a 21-year peak.

The railroads and oil stocks led the turn, and the advance fed upon pronouncements from Washington plus internal strength of the market itself.

Prices fell the first three days and then staged a three-day advance. Saturday the Associated Press average of 60 stocks gained 20 cents at $100.40 making the net gain on the week 60 cents.

The average now stands only $1.10 away from the 21-year high reached Oct. 15.

The amount of business on the stock exchange this week enpanded to 8,320,000 shares, the best since the week ended Oct. 27.

The day's volume came to 740,000 shares, the best since Oct. 27. There were 896 individual issues on the tape with 406 up and 240 down. Twenty-three new highs and 2 new lows were established.

Grain Prices Slowly Sink

CHICAGO (AP) – A slow downward drift, which stirred up very little trading activity at any time, dropped grains on the Board of Trade Saturday.

There was just one burst of buying activity—in wheat, right at the opening. The bread cereal rose around a cent on purchases from commission houses with southwestern milling connection. It faded quickly once that demand was satisfied.

Throughout the day, however, wheat acted better than nearly everything else, and the March contract managed to close with the smallest fractional gain. May rye also was firm, but trading there was very light.

Wheat closed ⅜ lower to ¼ higher to 1 cent higher, soybeans W-1⅝ lower and lard 3 cents lower to 5 cents a hundred pounds higher.
