Teletypewriter service is important to the press, to military forces, to industry. Radio relay carries telephone calls and television across the continent. Overseas service links America's telephones with most of the world. Ship-to-shore radio connects telephones on land with ships in harbors and at sea. Mobile telephones bring service to trucks, ambulances and other vehicles. Air raid warnings are carried to defense centers over special telephone lines.

America's Great Non-Secret Weapon

The telephone—our nation's nerve system—serves in many ways

Every telephone in America is a weapon for our defense. And these are not weapons yet to be built. They are here—more than four million of them in the West alone. Behind them is a force of men and women, thoroughly trained, well-equipped and eager to get on with any job the nation requires. Important as it is, the telephone itself is but one of the communications services we provide. The great nerve system of lines and cables and radio relay, built primarily for your telephone calls, has been adapted to serve in many, many ways. And perhaps never before have these services been so important to all the nation.

In military centers the telephone is hard at work helping organize and direct our forces. It's saving minutes and hours and days in defense production plants. It's on the job nearly everywhere today uniting the strength of our millions of people. There are more telephones at work in America than in all the rest of the world. And you can be sure they can be counted on to do their full part—always.

Your telephone is one of today's best bargains. Here's one great national asset which is still low in price. For telephone rates, on the average, are up less than half as much as the cost of living—a good buy in any budget... your home's or your nation's.

When a boy wants to call home, it's important to him and to our nation that he make that call. And at Army Camps, Naval Stations and other military centers throughout the West we have some 2,600 public telephones at work serving our servicemen. Pacific Telephone
