Despondent Woman Gulps Sleeping Pills

EL PASO, Tex. (AP)—An Oregon woman who fainted after taking eight sleeping pills in a spell of despondency over the death of a man who drowned trying to save her, was expected to be released from a hospital Thursday.

June Alsbrook, 22, told police that she killed Willis Pigg of Klamath Falls, Ore. Actually, she jumped into the Ling River after an argument with Pigg last June 22 and he drowned in an attempt to save her. She was rescued by others.

The woman said that her family paid a Klamath Falls policeman $800 if she agreed to leave town, Detective Capt. R. H. Lessor reported. She said that part of the agreement was that no charges would be filed.

But Lessor was told by Klamath Falls police that Miss Alsbrook is not wanted and her story of the $800 was discounted.

Ex-Major Star Opines Softball Ruins Kids

CHESTER, Pa. (AP)—George Case, former American League base stealing champion with the Washington Senators, says softball is ruining kids for baseball.

"Playing soft ball with an enlarged ball, an enlarged base paths and on a diamond originally built for baseball is, as far as I'm concerned, sacrilegious," Case told the Chester old timers' banquet Wednesday night.

He praised little league baseball, saying, "At least the kids are wearing spikes and getting the feel of a hard ball."

Johnny Ray Entertains Pen Inmates

Oregon's singing star Johnny Ray entertained about 1,300 convicts at Oregon State Penitentiary with songs for an hour Thursday night.

The popular record and radio singer known as "Mr. Emotion" has been vacationing in Oregon this week, visiting his parents in Roseburg and several relatives in the Salem area. He is a native of Dallas.

Ray's impromptu and unpaid concert was received enthusiastically by the inmates. He said he was singing there as a special favor to one of the inmates he had known as a boy in Jefferson.

Prison recreation officials said the concert was a big boost to the penitentiary recreation program. Similar entertainment would be much appreciated whenever offered, they added.

January Wet And Cold but Short of Snow

It was wet, chilly and cloudy in Salem during January, the Weather Bureau reported in its month-end summary Thursday.

Rainfall was 1.17 inches above normal, the average temperature was 38.5, a little more than six degrees above freezing, and 28 of the 31 days were classed as cloudy.

The highest temperature of both the month and the year, 57, was registered Thursday, the last day of the month. The low was reached on Jan. 2 when the thermometer dropped to a cold 19 degrees. The average maximum temperature for January was 44.5, and the average minimum was 32.5.

Twelve days during January the minimum temperature was 32 degrees or below, and on one day the maximum was 32 degrees.

Snowfall amounted to 2.5 inches during the month, with 1.1 inch of that falling in a 24-hour period Jan. 20-21. Rainfall amounted to 6.80 inches. There were no clear days during the month and only three days when the skies were just partly cloudy.

Gambling Tax Chops Illegal Activity Down

WASHINGTON (AP)—A revenue official said confidently Thursday the new federal gambling tax has choked off 90 per cent of the nation's illegal gambling business, estimated by investigating senators at 20 billion dollars a year.

Eugene Corie, the Revenue Bureau's expert on the gambling tax, told reporters "I don't know how long the honeymoon will last, but right now most of the bigtime gamblers have closed shop."

Corie said gambling operators are staging a mass exodus from the field because the new law required them to reveal their illegal operations to local police, the public and the press.

The publicity angle is particularly hurting gamblers, he said, because any "arrangement" with local police "could not stand up under the light of publicity."

Total collections from the gambling fraternity through December amount to $825,504—a far cry from the 400 million dollars a year in revenue estimated by congressmen when they enacted the gambling tax.

A breakdown of gambling returns by states showed Washington State has the biggest total of registered gamblers—with $70,109 collected for tax stamps. Illinois is second with $61,063. Montana third with $43,837, and Ohio fourth with $28,672.

Punchboards are legal in Washington and Montana, accounting for many stamp sales there.

Red Hangouts Raided by German Police

BONN, Germany (AP)—Hundreds of West German police Thursday raided the hangouts of German Communists and members of the neo-Nazi Socialist Reich Party, accused by the Bonn government of plotting revolution.

They made cellar to attic searches of homes and offices for documentary evidence of illegal activity to support the government's suits to outlaw both parties.

The police hauled away truckloads of papers, including records of party meetings, propaganda material, leaflets and bank records. No arrests were made.

Korean Orphan Learns About U.S. by Reading The Statesman

He's just "Jimmie," this little Korean lad, but he has a whole army outfit in Korea for his folks and copies of The Oregon Statesman as a guide to the English language.

One of his parents and teachers is a 20-year-old Salem soldier, Cpl. Gerald M. Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Kennedy, 245 S. Cottage St., and the husband of Mrs. Florine Steckley Kennedy, 1090 N. Winter St.

Where Jimmie came from or where he'll go is still a mystery, at least as far as Kennedy, his wife and mother are concerned. The corporal's outfit had already adopted Jimmie when Kennedy joined the unit in November of 1951. Apparently, like so many of the war orphans, Jimmie just wandered into the friendly circle of American soldiers and stayed.

"He's a nice, good, little kid who waits on us guys and cleans up our tents," Kennedy relates.

With the assistance of an English-Korean dictionary and the little book and really makes Kennedy's mother sends, Jimmie has begun to get a rough knowledge of what goes on in his foster-parents' homeland.

"Jimmie sits between my legs," Cpl. Kennedy writes, "looks at the pictures in The Statesman and asks questions. Then he gets out his little book and really makes the phrases and pages fly."

Cpl. Kennedy and others in his outfit, his wife says, are presently searching the area around Kimpoo Airfield, in an attempt to find relatives of the boy.

The time will come soon, the unit knows, when Jimmie will have to substitute for the couple hundred happy, young American soldiers some parents who have more permanence. But Kennedy says it's been good while it lasted.

Organized almost half a century ago, the choir from St. Olaf College, Northfield, Minn., is directed by Olaf C. Christiansen, son of the founder. It is expertly directed, beautifully staged and excels in beauty of voice and quality of the music presented.

The 60 young singers, wearing purple velvet robes sang a cappella. Voices in each part are pitched so perfectly and timed so precisely as to seem like a single voice.

All the music was of a religious nature, ranging from a motet for double choir by Bach as the opening number, through the works of early composers to the contemporary music, among the latter were two numbers by F. Melius Christiansen, founder of the choir and father of the present director.

The concert was indeed one of exceptional worth, and one to be long remembered by those who love choir music of the very best.

Winnie Wins First Test Against Labor

By JAMES F. KING LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill's Conservative Party government beat down handily Thursday night a Labor Party move for no confidence in the new program of grim lean living to help win peace.

The showdown vote, on a labor motion to censure the government was 309 to 278. After defeating censure, the House of Commons formally adopted the government's program, 306 to 275.

Liberals joined the Conservatives in this all-out test of strength of the Churchill government, which took office three months ago after six years of Labor rule.

Attlee Criticized The vote hinged on approval of Chancellor of the Exchequer R. A. Butler's program to cut British imports by 150 million pounds, or 420 million dollars, a year, and institute rigid new domestic economies.

The government has a majority of 14 over the other parties.

During the bitter two-day debate which preceded the vote the Laborites, spearheaded by former Prime Minister Attlee, coupled their attack on Conservative changes in the tax-supported health services with sharp criticism of the United States for some of the economic troubles facing Britain.

Churchill and his ministers took the floor in the debate. They declared the government's program aimed at staying off national bankruptcy and "restoring the confidence of the world in the determination of this country to pay its way."

Churchill would have had to resign if the censure motion had carried. He was in the chamber when the vote was announced.

Blood Donors Give 140 Pints In Gates Call

STATESMAN NEWS SERVICE GATES—Detroit Dam workers and other canyon residents turned out in force Thursday to contribute 140 pints of blood to the Red Cross.

This turnout brought Marion County's total blood collection to 567 pints in January and made the average well over 500 pints per month for the past five months. Two earlier Blood Days had been in Salem, one in Stayton.

More than 200 men and women offered blood Thursday, but not all were accepted as donors. Some were turned down because of the hazardous nature of their work.

The blood program here was planned by Don Gessner, American Federation of Labor agent, as general chairman, assisted by George Murray and Russell Hoffman, construction superintendent at the dam.

Principal chairmen who lined up volunteers to staff the blood collection station at Gates School were Robert Wingo, Mrs. George Steffy, Mrs. Edna Hurcheson, Kenneth Krozier and Richard Parker.

Yaquina Bay Lighthouse Receives Stay

PORTLAND (AP)—The old lighthouse at Yaquina Bay State Park has just a year of life left, and there is to be a new overnight camping facility at Emigrant Springs in the Blue Mountains.

Those were two of the actions by the State Highway Commission Thursday.

The lighthouse got the year of life to let the Lincoln County Historical Society move it if it wishes to do so. C. H. Armstrong, park superintendent for the commission, said the lighthouse, built in 1871, was in poor repair.

The commission told Armstrong to prepare plans for the Emigrant Springs camping facility.
