Three Newest Justices Write Most Opinions

The three newest members of the Oregon Supreme Court are writing two-thirds of the court's opinions, even though they weren't appointed to the bench until 1950.

The trio — Justices Walter L. Tooze, Earl C. Latourette and Harold J. Warner—have written 70 of the 105 opinions that the court has handed down since it returned from summer vacation last September.

Justice Tooze, a circuit judge in Portland until he was appointed to the supreme court only 16 months ago, is the freshman member of the court. But he leads all the rest with the 31 opinions he has turned out since September.

In second place is Justice Latourette, who as circuit judge in Oregon City and who was appointed to the supreme court 26 months ago. He has written 21 opinions. Justice Warner, a former Portland lawyer who joined the court 19 months ago, has written 18.

Justice Arthur D. Hay, who has been on the high bench since 1942, has written 12, compared with nine for Justice H. S. Lusk, who was appointed 15 years ago.

At the bottom of the list, with seven opinions each, are Chief Justice James T. Brand and Justice George Rossman. Brand has been a justice for 11 years, while

Decision Due, On Probe of Liquor Sales

Final disposition of charges that two Sweet Home stores sold liquor to minors is expected at a meeting of the Oregon Liquor Control Commission at 10 this morning in the Capitol.

Hearings were held at Albany within the past month concerning charges against the Midway and Corner Groceries, resulting from allegations that one of four youths killed in an auto wreck Feb. 9 had bought beer at one of the stores.

At the hearing on the Corner store it was indicated that the charge against it would be dropped, pending commission decision, but the store also faces similar charges, not connected with the fatal crash.

Soil Rotation, Fertilization Save Holland

Heavy fertilization and "soil rotation" are being used to keep Holland's small land area producing, Frank McKennon, chief of the division of plant industry, State Department of Agriculture, said Thursday.

McKennon told Salem Optimist Club of his tour last fall to Europe, under auspices of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization. He also showed colored slides of scenery and farming in the Low Countries and Italy.

He said Holland uses more fertilizer than any other country, both organic and chemical, to increase crops. Soil is rotated vertically, with properly balanced but deep soil dug out for top soil. Although this procedure is costly, he said, the country is without new lands to expand to for farming.
