

Street Name Changes Asked

Salem Planning and Zoning Commission will consider changing the names of eight Salem area streets, it was decided this week after Commissioner Milton L. Myers reported on name duplications found in conference with Postmaster Albert C. Grass.

The commission asked Meyers, street names chairman, to suggest new names at the April 15 commission meeting in City Hall. Most of the streets, said Meyers, have no houses on them yet.

Streets due for new names require public hearings and City Council action. Those under consideration now are:

Heads Elks

Carl Steelhammer, Salem business man who was elected exalted ruler of the Salem Elks Lodge Thursday night. He succeeds H. M. Randall. The new officers will be installed April 2.

Draft Board In Armory

Marion County inductees and draft registrants will report to a new location, Salem Armory, beginning Monday. First inductees will leave there April 2.

The selective service office will move Monday morning, it was announced Thursday. A lease for larger quarters on the Armory's second floor was signed recently.

The office moved from the Armory in 1948 to a warehouse off Court and Liberty Streets. Mrs. Edna Wilhelm, chief clerk, said the office would not be open until about noon Monday.

The board received a call to send seven men for induction April 2, but five of those will be transferred to other boards, leaving two to report at the Armory that day.

The Wars of the Roses in England during the 15th Century were conducted with a ferocity and brutality practically unknown in English history before or since.
