The third annual institute of the Oregon Chapter of the International Association of Public Employment Services, to discuss employment and other problems, will take place this week in Monmouth and Salem.

About 150 members of the IAPES from over Oregon are expected for the three-day conference. It will move to the State Capitol here Saturday April 26, after Thursday and Friday sessions at Oregon College of Education in Monmouth.

Two previous institutes, which attracted national recognition, were held in Portland.

Motley Due
Feature of this week's conference will be the appearance of Arthur W. Motley of Washington, D. C. He is assistant director of the Bureau of Employment Security in charge of the U. S. Employment Service.

Motley, who has been in public employment operations for 32 years, will give the principal address at the opening of the institute at OCE Thursday morning, April 24. His talk will range over the defense program with particular reference to manpower problems.

Dr. Robin J. Maaske, OCE president, will deliver the address of welcome Thursday.

Two Panels
On the afternoon program will be two panels: "Integration of cooperating agencies with employment security," and "Labor looks at employment security." Prof. A. Freeman Holmer of Willamette University and Dr. Francis Haines of OCE will be moderators.

Participants in the first panel will include: integration of cooperating agencies with employment security; Virgil O'Malley, state prison warden; Oscar I. Paulsen, of the State Vocational Education department and Miss Loa Howard, state public welfare director. In the second, will be George Brown of the CIO union, Norman Niles, State Apprenticeship Council, and E. S. Benjamin, secretary of the Salem Cannery Workers Union.

Buschman to Talk
Richard Buschman of Seattle, regional director of the employment security bureau, will be the main speaker Friday morning following the welcome by Guy Lang of Eugene, state IAPES president. A panel on blocked unemployment claims will be led by Don Sutherland of Salem, a State Industrial Accident Commission executive.

Two programs Friday afternoon will be led by Ted Halleck of radio station KPOJ in Portland. These will include sessions dealing with elderly persons in employment and an employer survey of employment security functions.

Saturday's session at the Capitol will have Edwin H. Armstrong, administrative assistant to Gov. McKay, as moderator in a discussion of human and public relations. Talks will be given by James Clinton, State Civil Service director, and Prof. Mark Hatfield of Willamette University, who also is a state representative.

Dispute Stalls Armed Forces Pay Boost Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A dispute over hazard bonus pay for airmen, submariners, parachutists and other specialists threatened Sunday to hold up a pay boost for all the armed forces and Sen. Hunt (D-Wyo.) said he doesn't think it can be resolved by May 15.

That date has been fixed as a tentative deadline, but Hunt told a reporter he does not think it can be met.

"We can't brush this off in a few moments unless we want to jeopardize our air power and other key defense forces," he said.

Sen. Douglas (D-Ill.), a Marine Lieutenant Colonel in the last war, kicked up the congressional dispute by demanding deep cut in the present bonus pay for some officers and men in the armed services assigned to flying, submarines and other special hard duty.

Air Force to Issue Policy in Fliers' Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Court-martial of Air Force pilots who refuse to fly have been halted pending a new statement of policy, the Defense Department reported Sunday night.

It was disclosed at Sacramento, Calif., Saturday that orders already had been received there to stop disciplinary action against six officers who had refused to fly.

Air Force Secretary Finletter is expected to issue a statement early this week, after conferring with Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force chief of staff.

There was no official comment immediately on whether the statement might indicate a new and softer policy toward the officers who have refused to fly.

One officer already has been sentenced to two years in prison on disobedience charges and similar charges are pending against at least a dozen other Air Force officers who have declined to fly.

Elsis will explain his organization's purposes in the conference to be held here. Those attending will give advice and exchange ideas in regard to the multiple fund raising drives.

Union Leader Here to Aid in Chest Meeting

Volunteer agencies embracing health, welfare and recreational programs have by right a claim upon American Federation of Labor membership, an AFL official said Sunday.

He is Stanley C. Elsis, AFL field representative for the United Community Defense Service, one of the affiliated agencies of the Community Chest and Councils. Elsis is in Salem to attend the state-wide Community Chest conference opening Tuesday in the Marion Hotel.

And the more than 8,000,000 members of the AF of L, Elsis continues, have also the right to help plan and direct such agencies.

The AF of L has joined its efforts to the other citizens who make up the United Fund campaigns of which the Community Chest and Councils is a part.

Relieve Congestion
Elsis described the work of his organization, the UCDS in relieving congestion and unpleasant living conditions in major "critical" areas of the country. At present, he said, the UCDS is conducting a survey in The Dalles, where a dam and bridge construction will bring in thousands of new laborers and where adequate housing, recreational and other facilities are lacking.

The major aim of the AF of L, Elsis said, in lining up with volunteer agencies is to achieve labor management cooperation in giving support to these volunteer agencies.

"It can hardly be expected that these agencies can fully appeal to either labor or management," Elsis declared. "But with labor and management a part of the effort itself, then the maximum can be reached on a volunteer basis."

Labor-Management
Already labor-management councils are in operation, such as the two-year old organization in Salem composed of six labor officials, six management officials, with William Kinsey, state labor commissioner as chairman.

At present, Elsis said, the Community Chest, is the only organization of its type in which a labor organization is an active participant. Representatives from the AF of L sit on the boards of all the major affiliated agencies which work with and derive their funds from the Community Chest and Councils, which, in some localities, such as Salem, band together to form the United Defense Funds during their drives.

Elsis will explain his organization's purposes in the conference to be held here. Those attending will give advice and exchange ideas in regard to the multiple fund raising drives.
