Exchange Helps Connect Patients With Doctors

Mrs. Vince Elliott is shown taking a call at the little-known Salem Medical Exchange switchboard. The exchange is operated as a public service by local doctors. Calls, mostly at night, come in over two switchboards from patients seeking to locate doctors.

City Medical Exchange Keeps Track of Doctors' Whereabouts

If you want a doctor at night in Salem chances are good that you will get him through the Salem Medical Exchange—only you probably won't know it.

The exchange is a little-known public service participated in by some 70 medical doctors of Marion-Polk County Medical Association in the immediate vicinity of Salem. It is really a round-the-clock telephone switchboard which keeps tabs on the whereabouts of your doctor or a suitable alternate.

It also handles other contacts including a list of private duty registered nurses. When hospitals call for blood the exchange routes the call through to Red Cross.

Opened here in April, 1950, the exchange is operated by Mr. and Mrs. Vince Elliott and an assistant, Jerome Welch, Headquarters, where their switchboards are located, is in the Pacific Building. Elliott says there are about 3,000 such exchanges in the United States. Portland's, founded in 1917, was one of the first.

The program operates simply. Nearly all doctors have their own and the exchange numbers listed in the telephone book. If a patient, or anyone else seeking a doctor, cannot locate the medico at his office he calls the exchange. The exchange is then supposed to know where the doctor is, where the doctor can be located, or will have the name of an alternate doctor.

Most of the calls are from patients seeking their doctors. Lots of calls, though, have an enormous human interest element. The exchange has handled long distance doctor-seeking calls from Ohio, Iowa and New York.

Drunk Requests
"Then there are the drunks," says Elliott. "Especially on week ends. They are out some place and get bloated. They think they need a doctor and of course we have the dubious honor of handling their requests."

At least twice Elliott has rubbed voices, so to speak, with dope addicts. One narcotics addict called the exchange for a doctor. He got one. The doctor hurried to a hotel room where the addict writhed in supposedly intense pain. He talked the medico into giving him a shot of dope, which is what he wanted. The next day the addict tried the same trick but Elliott recognized the voice and stymied the plan.

Zoning Hearings Set on Projects in Capitol Street Area

Public hearings on two proposed business developments in the North Capitol Street area will take place tonight at City Hall during a 7:30 p.m. meeting of the Salem Planning and Zoning Commission.

One proposal to be aired is a request for special business zoning on the south side of Center Street near North Capitol, to permit location of a two-story business building there by Giles Smith. The other concerns application by V. J. Osko, insurance man, for permission to add a second story to his office building at 1465 N. Capitol St. The addition would be space for business rental.

"The exchange is the expediter of Salem's medical program. Doctor and patient are more closely linked, communication-wise, and the community benefits as a result."

"You might say," says Elliott.

Teacher Lack To Continue

There will be no marked improvement in the teacher supply situation when the public schools open for the fall term next September, Rex Putnam, state superintendent of public instruction, said Monday.

He said the time for current teachers to sign contracts with their present employers expired April 1 and the turnover was approximately the same as last year. Putnam said there has been no reduction in the number of emergency teachers' certificates issued by the state education department under legislative authority.

Most serious situation, according to Putnam, is in the smaller school districts. Specialized teachers in the larger school districts also are in demand, he averred. Attendance at the state colleges of education which specialize in teacher training has not been as large as anticipated at the end of World War II.

Mrs. Sheridan Dies, Rites on Wednesday

Mrs. Anna M. Sheridan, late resident of Salem Route 5, Box 507, died at a local hospital Sunday following an extended illness.

She was the widow of the former owner of Hazel Dell Dairy who died last August. Mrs. Sheridan was born Sept. 21, 1881, in Sublimity, and moved with her parents to Salem. She had resided in Salem ever since. She was married in Salem Feb. 11, 1901.

Recitation of the Rosary is to be held tonight at 8 p.m. in the Chapel of the Clough-Barrick Company. Requiem mass is to be held Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. in St. Josephs Catholic Church with interment at St. Barbara Cemetery.

Survivors include daughters, Mrs. Mary A. Robinson, Salem; Mrs. Hazel D. Hardin, Portland; Mrs. Loyal M. Jory, Salem; son, Lawrence G. Sheridan, of the U. S. Marines; sisters, Mrs. Rita B. Gamble, Salem; Mrs. Sarah Fourmier, Sea View, Wash.; and Mrs. Emma Atterbury, Portland. Also survived by a grandson, Phil Hardin, Portland.

Sherman County First to Report

Sherman has the distinction of being the first county in Oregon to report its returns of Friday's primary election to the state elections bureau.

David O'Hara, registrar of the state elections bureau, said it probably would require at least three weeks to complete the official canvass, due to the large number of candidates on the state ballot. State election bureau officials warned Monday that candidates at the primary elections must file their expense statements within 15 days. Committees have 10 days in which to file their expense accounts.

BEE LINE

KENT, O. (INS)—If cultivated bees can buzz around certain kinds of shade trees, they're apt to produce more honey. So says Martin L. Davey Jr., president of the Davey Tree Expert Co. Honey bees, according to Mr. Davey, particularly like to make a bee-line for the linden, honeysuckle, tulip-tree, tupelo, sourwood, black locust, eucalyptus, willow and palmetto palm during flowering periods.

How to make good telephone service even better....

it's easy to be a good telephone neighbor, too

If yours is a party-line, it's easy to be a neighborly telephone user. Just keep these simple points in mind when you make telephone calls: When you have a series of calls to make, allow a few minutes between them • Make sure the line is clear before you call • Replace the receiver properly in its cradle after calling. These suggestions will mean still better party-line service for you, too. For if you make them a habit, you'll find that they give people a better chance to call you.

emergency calls may arise while you are using your party-line. If a telephone neighbor breaks in and explains the emergency, it's always thoughtful to hang up and complete your call later.

a tip you can give the youngsters

They won't miss incoming calls... which are often more important than those they make... If they remember not to tie up the line with lengthy conversations.
