Will Johnson, Sourdough Poet, Revisits Salem, Finds Changes

An old sourdough who helped pioneer Alaska is this week visiting Salem where he spent his boyhood.

He's Will A. Johnson who turned to poetry and magazine writing in recent years after prospecting, mining and other business in Alaska since 1906. He is now 79.

Johnson, who hadn't been to Salem since 1905, says he can't find enough old landmarks to get his bearing on here. When he was a lad the Southern Pacific mainline was "way out in the country" as was the State Hospital which was on his Statesman newspaper route. He delivered papers on a pony. He also worked as a boy for the old D. F. Wagner dry goods store on Commercial Street.

He is visiting a cousin, Mrs. J. E. Kirk, 1026 N. 5th St., along with his wife and brother and sister-in-law, the Carl C. Johnsons. Both couples now live in Bellingham, Wash.

Johnson spent 45 years in Alaska, prospecting in the Valdez sector, then wilderness; building the first cabin at Taiketa (1910); hunting and staking placer claims around the site of what later became Anchorage; serving as scout and guide for the first survey party for the Alaska Railroad north of Wasilla.

He is a past president and honorary life member of the exclusive Anchorage Igloo of the Pioneers of Alaska. He began to write as a hobby as he became less active and at the age of 76 authored a book of verse, "Untrodden Trails." Alaska newspapers, magazines and societies gave him a big send-off when he and his wife moved to Bellingham last year. He'd never had frozen so much as the tip of his nose, but he finally admitted the winters were becoming a bit chilly for him.

Beddoe Back As Deputy to County Sheriff

Arthur Beddoe, former Willamette University football player, returned to Marion County sheriff's staff this week after a nine-month absence.

He will serve as a deputy on the 3 to 11 p. m. shift in the office. Sheriff Denver Young said Beddoe replaces Calvin Steward, who left to seek other employment after some nine months on the staff.

Beddoe was a deputy for about eight months prior to leaving last July as a state probation officer. He plans to go to Willamette Law School, beginning in September. He and his wife reside at 1537 Court St.

Hospital Rate Moves Up at City Hospitals
An increase in most rates at Salem hospitals, as a result of a statewide pay boost for employees, was disclosed Tuesday.

Effective May 1, regular ward rates were raised $1.25 per day to $12.75, to reach equality with obstetrical ward rates, which were not changed.

A new fee added by both General and Memorial Hospitals, although in general use previously in other cities, is a charge of $2 per day for babies in the nursery. Until now 50 cents per day has been added to the charge for a mother, with no differential for multiple births or for a deceased child.

The hospitals said some medical and special charges have been reduced at the same time. Nurses were granted a $20 monthly raise, to a basis $240 per month, and other employees gained proportionate increases.
