Vegetable Variety Artichokes Provide Interesting Food Now That Vegetables Good

By MAXINE BUREN
Statesman Woman's Editor
We are a lover of artichokes, those odd looking vegetables that you either like very well, or think are silly. This vegetable is still in the market, and is a good buy, for there is lots of style and quite a bit of nourishment in them. When selecting your artichoke, pick out those that aren't too far open, and whose petals are meaty and thick. When priced by the pound, they will have a rather long stem. In preparing it for cooking, leave some of this stem on.

WAYS TO COOK
Many like to merely boil the 'chokes in salted water, while others prefer to pep them up with some garlic and spices. We usually put in a handful of mixed pickling spices and a very little oil to make the artichokes glossy. Allow 30 to 60 minutes for cooking, depending upon age and tenderness of the vegetable. Test by pulling off an outer leaf which comes off easily when done. If artichokes are to be stuffed, take out the fuzzy choke in the center with a sharp knife.

SELECT SAUCE
As to sauces—drawn butter is the most favored, but you can vary it nicely by adding some chili sauce (1/4 cup to 2 tablespoons butter) and heating together, or French melted butter which consists of 1 beaten yolk poured over 1 cup melted butter while stirring briskly. Hold over fire a moment but don't allow to boil or it will curdle. Add a little lemon or vinegar just before serving. Also served with hot artichoke are Hollandaise sauce, Bearnaise sauce and cold, French dressing or mayonnaise. You will find these sauces in most cookbooks.

Here are some fancier recipes for artichokes found in a magazine published some 25 years ago and found among my clippings:

ARTICHOKE SURPRISE
4 medium artichokes 1 cup cracker crumbs
8 oysters 3 tablespoons butter
Salt and pepper
Tie artichokes with string and boil until tender. Remove all the white, tender parts and the heart, taking care not to break outside of case. With scissors, cut up tender leaves, heart and the oysters. Mix together and add other ingredients, seasoning to taste. Fill the artichoke cases with this, tying a string around them to keep in shape. Put into baking pan with just a little water, put lid on and bake 30 minutes at 300 degrees. Pour a little melted butter over the top as served. These make good luncheon dishes entree for dinner.

If you like the flavor of the artichokes but prefer to have the goodie taken off the leaves another way than with the teeth, try this salad:

MOLDED ARTICHOKE SALAD
6 artichokes, cooked 1/2 cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons gelatine 1/2 cup salt and paprika
1/2 cup cold water 1 cup whipped cream
1/2 cup boiling water 1 cup mayonnaise

Remove leaves from cooked artichokes and scrape tender part from each with spoon. Soften gelatine in cold water and dissolve in hot, add seasonings, cool. Combine with cream and mayonnaise and add artichoke pulp. Place artichoke heart in the bottom of each cup or mold, pour on gelatine mixture and chill. Serve garnished with a little mayonnaise.
