TV Nothing New for Men In Training

NORTHEAST FORT LEWIS, Wash. — Television probably will be old stuff to hundreds of Oregon National Guardsmen by the time home-grown TV gets underway in the state.

Many Oregon men are getting their first taste of television here, at the two-week summer encampment of the 41st Infantry Division. And the "new" form of evening recreation is getting a big reception.

Chairs in the service club lounge were at a premium immediately after the word spread that four television sets had been installed.

Two of the sets were brought from Portland by the Oregon Headquarters Detachment, borrowed from distributors. The other two sets were obtained on a "loan" from distributors in Seattle.

The problem of installation was solved by 41st Signal Company technicians, who borrowed antennas and other equipment from Tacoma-area dealers.

Susie Wallace Valley Pioneer Dies at Age 90

Mrs. Susie Laughey Wallace, who was carried across the plains in 1864 on the lap of her mother, an early-day proponent of women's suffrage, died Friday in a Salem hospital at the age of 90. Mrs. Wallace, born in Iowa in 1862, was the daughter of Harriet Buckston and William Laughey. Her mother drove the lead team of a wagon train coming from Iowa to Oregon in 1864. During the six-months trip, Mrs. Laughey taught Sunday school to the children of the train.

After their arrival in Oregon, they settled in McMinnville, where Mrs. Wallace spent her girlhood. Her mother became active in promoting women's suffrage and was one of the first women ever to address a joint session of the Oregon legislature.

Mrs. Wallace came in 1904 to Salem, where her husband, Edward West Wallace, worked as a landscape gardener for the state. They were married in 1888, and he died in 1922, two weeks before their son, Gordon. Another son, A. L. (Art) Wallace, Salem, survives.

A resident of 1705 Chemekeka St., Mrs. Wallace was a member of Calvary Baptist Church and for many years was superintendent of the Cradle Roll.

Also surviving is a brother, W. D. Laughey of Riverside, Calif.

Funeral services will be held in the W. T. Rigdon Chapel at 1:30 p.m. Monday, with the Rev. Omar Barth officiating.

Morse Urges Passport Rule Change Action

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Morse (R-Ore.) urged Congress Friday to give the Subversive Activities Control Board power to overrule the State Department on some passport matters.

The board was created by the McCarran Internal Security Act to determine whether organizations must register with the Justice Department as Communist action or Communist front groups. It is an independent agency, responsible to Congress, although members are appointed by the President.

Morse linked his demand to new thrusts at what he calls "tyrannical and arbitrary" refusal of State Department officials to issue passports to some persons, or explain their refusals.

In a Senate speech marking introduction of his bill, Morse introduced that he has been subjected "even in the Senate to innuendo and implication that the junior Senator from Oregon Morse himself in some way sponsors or aids the Communists" by his stand. "Not a single person in the Senate is more opposed to Communism or what Communism stands for," he declared.

Morse's bill would give the control board power to order the Secretary of State to issue a passport, and its ruling would be final. The measure would set up machinery permitting anyone denied a passport to appeal to the board within 60 days and get a public hearing. One clause, however, would permit the board to furnish information in the case when to make it public would be "prejudicial to security."

Morse told a reporter he has virtually no hope the measure will pass in this session of Congress, now striving to wind up its work by July 3.

Battered Ship Towed From Bandon Port

BANDON, Ore. (AP)—The battered lumber schooner Cynthia Olson, patched with concrete and equipped with a battery of diesel pumps, was towed Friday night from this Southern Oregon harbor.

The ship ran aground at the mouth of the Coquille River here June 7 and was holed as it bounced in rough seas. It was pulled off the bar the following day only to run aground again.

The holes in the ship's hull were patched with concrete last week and pumps were installed to keep the ship afloat while it is being towed to Portland by the tug Salvage Chief.

The crew of 28, none of whom was injured when the ship ran aground, still is aboard. The ship is expected in the Portland harbor Sunday night or Monday.

State to Host Walnut Board For First Time

By Lillie L. Madsen Farm Editor, The Statesman For the first time in its 18 years of being, the Walnut Control Board will convene in the Northwest.

Of special interest to walnut growers and packers is the announcement, too, that all board meetings are open to anyone who wishes to attend. The meetings, which are held annually for the purpose of reviewing the past season's operations under the Marketing Agreement and Order administered by the board, are scheduled to open at 10 a.m., July 1, in the Marine room of the Multnomah Hotel.

The reason given for the break in the precedent of holding meetings in California, is that a major agenda item, study of a proposition to reduce expenses in the processing of surplus walnuts destined for shelling, is of particular significance to operations in the Northwest. An additional consideration is the boards expressed intention to bring the operations of the marketing program closer to participants in Oregon and Washington.

Arrangements have been made for an open discussion forum to be held immediately following the regular business meeting of the board. Those in attendance will have the opportunity to direct questions and comments to the board and its management in preference to operations of the marketing program.

The discussion period was proposed and arranged by R. A. Duncan and B. L. Melden, the growers and handlers of Oregon and Washington. These two annually produce and market approximately 10 per cent of the Pacific Coast walnut crop. The other board members are six representatives of California growers and handlers, and a fourth member who has no commercial interest in the industry who serves as chairman.

The board's traditional survey of the past season's marketing of in-shell walnuts, with this year, include a report on shelled walnut production and sales as developed from reports submitted by operators of shelling plants. Since marketing of the in-shell commodity is practically completed, the combined reports should provide a fair picture of the volume moved during the past season, and trade inventories which can be expected as the industry enters the summer months.

Special attention will be given to reducing costs in the processing of surplus walnuts which are to be shelled. At the present time, regulations require that, prior to shelling, all such walnuts must attain the same minimum quality standards as those entering the in-shell market. The proposed revision would alter the quality standards, but would allow packers to qualify the surplus appearance of surplus walnuts destined for use as shelling stock on the basis of a fully processed sample.

Guards Slate Review With Camp Training

Mid-Willamette Valley National Guardsmen will pass in review in the 41st Division this afternoon at Ft. Lewis, Wash., before Gov. Douglas McKay and others.

In addition to the governor, others going from Salem for the review include Mayor Alfred W. Loucks.

The division is at the mid-point of its annual encampment, with pay day set for next Friday and return home next Saturday.

Monday the division will move to the wooded hills east of Fort Lewis proper for three days of Army field test and command post exercises.

Sunday is the day for excursions. Guardsmen will have their choice of three trips. One, by bus, is scheduled of the alpine scenery of Mt. Rainier. Another will take the guardsmen to Victoria, B. C., on the "Princess" liner, and another trip is scheduled for the Bremerton Navy base.

U. S. Orders Planes From Europeans

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States, without making any commitments, outlined a plan Friday under which it would buy finished aircraft from Western European nations — chiefly for their own use in the mutual defense program.

An official announcement released here and in Paris emphasized that any decision to spend U. S. tax dollars for foreign-made planes will depend in large part upon the willingness of Allied governments to use their own funds to help buy planes for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

The announcement came at a time when purchases of American-made aircraft have been somewhat slowed by military budget reductions.
